There Is Good News And Gruesome News When the British Sailed Away Mr. President, Please

—By Arthur Brisbane—

Copyright, 1934, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.

There is some cheerful news. Edsel Ford, son of Henry, and a great help to his father as president of the Ford Company, dined with President Roosevelt in Warm Springs, Ga., and told him the nation is "out of the trough."

The two Fords are good judges of returning prosperity. They expect to sell at least one million other "Fords" this coming year.

Florida expects its best season in years. Colonel F. B. Shutts, owner of the Miami Herald, visiting New York, tells of five million dollars worth of new building at Miami Beach, an ocean beach city for which Carl Fisher, its creator, will always be remembered in Florida with gratitude.

Napoleon said that when he died all Europe would utter "a big ouf" of relief, and it did. California uttered such a big "ouf" recently, and now reports improving conditions, with real estate, comatose throughout the country since 1929, returning to life.

George Young, Frank Barham and Clarence Lindner, who know California better than the Pacific ocean knows it, agree that this is to be a big California winter, and California being an all-year state, next summer will be the big summer. Thanks to flying, California is only one day from New York, or any other American city.

Good news of two states is good news for all states. People do not travel to find winter sun unless there is some prosperity at home.

There is gruesome news, of the usual type, as well as good news. Three young girls, 16, 10 and 7 years old, were found dead on a mountain side near Carlisle, Pa. One blanket had been put over them, another under them. The doctors could not establish the cause of death, but thought it might have been caused, intentionally, by gas from an automobile exhaust. Three men seen in an automobile are suspected.

All identifying marks had been removed from the children's clothing, they could not be identified, although hundreds came to look at them. Such murders, and horrible crimes accompanying them, make Americans wonder how long their country is to be the murderers' happy, safe hunting ground.

Samuel Insull and sixteen codefendants are acquitted of using the mails to defraud. A majority of the jury, which took two hours to decide, voted for acquittal from the start.

Apparently Mr. Insull might have avoided that tiring trip to Greece and all the expense.

One hundred and fifty one years ago this last Sunday the British army, encamped in New York City, went aboard British ships, abandoning the city. George Washington, with his troops, marched down the Bowery, turned into a crooked cow trail, now called Pearl street and still as crooked as ever, and on to Wall street and Broadway. In Bowling Green an American sailor cut down a gaudy lead pole, took down the British ensign, putting the Stars and Stripes in its place, and that began a new chapter.

A question that puzzles some Americans is:

Why must we every little while ask the British to come back, and through Baljour or some other ambassador, tell us what we may do about building ships and other things?

George Washington never needed British advice or consent, and his U. S. A. had fewer than four million population.

Senator Nye, an earnest man, devoted to peace, but not at "any price," asks the big United

MR. HEARST on Communism And Fascism

In the following message, William Randolph Hearst sends instructions to the editors of his various publications expressing his views on Communism and Fascism. Mr. Hearst's views were prompted by the reported plan of a "Fascist plot" in the United States.

To the Managing Editors Of All Hearst Newspapers:

I DO not think there is any actual Fascist movement in the United States AS YET.

When we magnify these so-called Fascist plots, we are barking at a knot, (as the frontiersmen said), when there is a real coon up a neighboring tree.

The real "coon" is the Communist development; and there will never be a genuine Fascist movement in this country until COMMUNISM COMPELS IT.

The menace of Communism is what developed Fascism in Europe. There was no other cause for it—no other reason for it.

Fascism is definitely a movement to oppose and offset Communism, and so prevent the least

WHAT 11 JUDGES THROUGHOUT NATION SAY ABOUT VANDERBILT DECISION

Copyright 1934, by Universal Service.

In an effort to learn how Supreme Court Justice Carew's decision in the Vanderbilt case is viewed in legal circles, the Boston American and other Hearst newspapers have asked leading judges in many cities for their opinions.

In outspoken comment, many of these jurists have expressed sharp disagreement with Carew, not only in his ruling, but also in his handling of the proceedings.

Several of those whose views are given have spent many years handling similar cases involving the custody of children. Their statements reflect the amazement with which the Carew ruling was received by a representative cross-section of the American judiciary.

The Carew order granted custody of 10-year-old

ACTION ON ELY RACE BOARD DELAYED

Demands that the entire primary campaign committee of General Charles H. Cole be called as witnesses greeted Governor Ely at the State House today as his council met with a hope of settling the two weeks' battle over appointment of Cole, William H. Brown and Charles F. Conners as the new racing commission.

The council met in special session to consider these and other appointments, many of which were made since the election of Governor-elect James M. Curley and have been the subject of criticism.

The first few hours of the session ignored the racing and other problems, however. The councillors poured over the formal tabulation of the recent State vote so that

MARY CURLEY NAMES AID

In preparation for her functioning as "First Lady of Massachusetts," Miss Mary Curley, it was learned today, has appointed as her social secretary a girl who was her classmate in the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

The appointment indicates that while "Daddy Jim," who will take office as governor on New Year's Day, may not be able to take part in many social activities for at least six months—as he announced—Mary will still play hostess on her end to relieve the more serious hours.

Her first social function is expected to be a small luncheon on Inaugural Day, in the Copley Plaza hotel.

The social secretary is Miss Dorothy F. Mullin, daughter of Attorney Francis R. Mullin of Winchester and a friend of Miss Curley since their convent school days.

After attending the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Miss Mullin went to Emmanuel College and then to the Katherine Gibbs secretarial school for two years.

Treasure Hunt Yields $2160

By Associated Press

Dublin, N. H., Nov. 26—A successful hunt for $2160 in gold, buried on a wooded ridge, was revealed here today for the first time by Attorney Howard B. Lane, representative of the administrator for the estate of Mrs. Agnes Parsons, of Washington, D. C.

Lane described the discovery of the money, in $10 and $20 gold coins, buried in a teapot near the former summer residence of the Washington woman. A letter giving directions to the treasure was found among the woman's effects nearly a year after her death, the lawyer asserted.

Following its directions at the order of the woman's son, Jaffrey Parsons, of Washington, Lane and two diggers unearthed the aged teapot filled with gold coins that had been buried for several years.

Can You Identify These Tragic Figures?

In the hope that some Greater Boston person may recognize them, the Boston Evening American is printing this photograph of the three fair-haired little girls, found dead in a rain-soaked thicket near Carlisle, Pa. Recent clues indicate the possibility that the children may have been from Boston or the vicinity. The name of one of the victims may have been Norma. If you think you know these children, communicate at once with the City Editor, Boston Evening American, LIBerty 4000. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

U.S. TAX 'FIXING' FRAUDS BARED

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 26—Combatting what officials described was a far-reaching conspiracy to defraud taxpayers and the government, Secretary Morgenthau has dismissed two employes of the Internal Revenue Bureau, one a responsible official, and will seek a number of indictments before the District of Columbia grand jury.

Authoritative sources said two prominent New York "tax consultants" are alleged to have conspired with the Revenue Bureau employes to "fix" important tax cases pending before the bureau.

Indictment of at least two and possibly six persons was described as possible as a result of a mass of evidence to be presented to the grand jury by special agents of the intelligence unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau.

VICTIMS RODE WITH HIM FROM HERE LAST WEEK

Earl Sylvester, driver for the Eastern Greyhound bus lines, today in South Boston positively identified pictures of the children slain in Pennsylvania as three children who rode with a woman on his bus from Boston to New York one day last week. Sylvester lives at 33 M street, South Boston. He made the identification at the Greyhound garage in East First street, South Boston, where he saw the photos in a copy of the Boston Evening American.

Three little girl victims of the babes-in-the-woods death mystery at Carlisle, Pa., were tentatively identified today as from Boston.

A bus driver who identified them made a less certain identification of a young woman slain at Duncansville, Pa., as the companion of the children on a bus trip from New York to Harrisburg, Pa., last Wednesday.

Every angle of the tragic mystery deepened as Pennsylvania looked to Boston for solution and local police launched an exhaustive inquiry at all schools and bus lines.

Cause of the children's death remained undetermined. No trace of carbon monoxide of asphyxiation was found by blood tests, authorities announced. There had been no criminal attack. New tests for poison are being made.

The case continued to develop as one of the most baffling death mysteries of modern times—its solution perhaps waiting upon some development in Greater Boston.

CUDDLED IN DEATH

The girls, probably sisters between the ages of seven and sixteen, were found Saturday cuddled in death in blankets on the side of a mountain in Carlisle. Autopsies indicate they died Wednesday or Thursday.

At about 60 miles from Carlisle, in the lonely railroad station in Duncansville, on Thursday night, the young woman tentatively identified as having been the companion of the children, was shot and killed by a man who then killed himself.

Thousands have viewed the

GLORIA GOES TO CHURCH WITH HER AUNT

By Universal Service

New York, Nov. 26—Little Gloria Vanderbilt went to church yesterday. But her mother could not go with her.

In the choir loft of St. Joseph's Catholic church at Garden City, L. I., the heiress listened to the Reverend Patrick McGowan of the Redemptorist Order thunder forth the Gospel according to St. Matthew:

"For there shall be great tribulation such as hath not been from the beginning of the world until now"

Stiff as a ramrod and clutching a prayer book in one hand, she made a brave effort to observe the ritual, but two errors betrayed her. She crossed herself with her left hand instead of her right, and she failed to interpret the significance of the tinkling altar bell. Incidentally, she dropped a $10 bill in the collection basket.

The usher offered her change but was waved away by others in Gloria's pew.

Throughout the mass, Gloria and her aunt sat, stood or knelt with the congregation, watching their neighbors out of the corners of their eyes. But when the bell rang for the more solemn moments of the mass, neither struck her breast, as did the rest of the congregation.

At one side of her sat her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, in whose care Supreme Court Justice Carew placed her as ward of the state. With them were a governess and a private detective. Outside the church three more detectives waited.

A few miles away in a darkened room of her silent home, Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, Gloria's beautiful young mother, wept as she told why she passed the day—one of the two each week in which she might have had her daughter under the court's decision—alone.

Pallid and convalescent, the older Gloria, figure in the sensational warfare still raging about the child, declared she was "torn between mother-love and the law." She said:

"Of course I am anxious to see Gloria again. But can I? Even my attorneys cannot tell me."

"Under Justice Carew's strange decision, they fear I might jeopardize my legal rights, might prevent myself from appealing to higher courts to regain my child, if I attempted or consented to see her now."

Mrs. Vanderbilt was to leave the city today to seek solace and recuperation with friends.

"She is going to Washington," said Nathan Burkan, her counsel. "She is worn out and wants to rest and recuperate in privacy."

Gloria Goes to Church

AUTOPSY FAILS TO DETERMINE DEATH CAUSE

bodies of all five and nobody has been able to say who they are.

The identification that turned the investigation toward Boston was made by Paul White, 38, of Harrisburg, Pa.

RODE ON HIS BUS

White, after viewing the bodies of the children, said he was certain they were passengers on the bus he drove from New York to Harrisburg on Wednesday morning.

He said they were with a "tired looking" woman of about 30 or 35. At various stops he played with one of the children.

White said all had New England accents and that he understood they were making a bus trip from Boston to Pittsburgh. Harrisburg is on the Pittsburgh route.

POSITIVE OF ONE

THe was positive in his identification of the youngest child, whose name he said was Jennie. Before seeing her coat he described a hole in it, which police found to exist.

During the trip from New York to Harrisburg, where there is a change of drivers, the woman and the two older children dozed in rear seats while the youngest child sat up near him, White said.

White identified a suitcase found two miles from the bodies of the children as one of the pieces of luggage the woman had. Through a belt from one of the children's coats found in this suitcase the bag had previously been linked to the children.

White was shown a photograph of the woman slain in Duncansville and exclaimed:

"That looks like her!"

The woman on the bus with the children wore a red dress. So did the woman killed in Duncansville. White will be taken to view the body of the woman.

His story of the passengers on the bus was corroborated by the steward on the trip. The steward said he knew a woman and three children made the trip, but that he doubted he could identify them.

HUNT ABANDONED AUTO

Search is being made in the Duncansville region for an abandoned car which it is suspected the men and woman may have left Harrisburg with the children and continued on to Duncansville after the deaths of the children.

Authorities [illegible] The woman in Duncansville was about 28 (which conflicts with White's estimated age of the woman on the bus) 120 pounds, light bobbed brown hair. She wore a red wool dress and a pea green coat. In her pockets were only a compact, a hair comb and handkerchiefs.

The man killed with her, by bullets from a rifle that lay between them, was 40 years of age. Stubs of tickets from a Philadelphia theater were found in his clothes.

Several buses which made connections in New York with the bus driven by White left Boston Tuesday night, reaching New York in the early hours of the morning.

HOPE IN SCHOOL CHECK

Detectives checked at every bus agency here, seeking trace of the sale of four tickets, two half-fare. More hope of solution, however, appeared to rest in the check being made at schools for "three empty seats."

Such a check was ordered in every city and town in New England.

Bus offices in other New England cities are also being checked.

Miss Mary Molla, clerk in the school superintendent's office at Franklin told the Boston American that on Monday of last week a well educated, well dressed man of 40 called at her office and inquired of three girls by the name of Minnehan he believed were pupils at the schools.

A checkup was made of the high schools and elementary grades, but there were no pupils by that name at the school.

NO DEFINITE THEORY

Frontal and profile pictures of the children in death are being rushed to Boston by police to aid in identification efforts.

No definite theory with regard to the mystery has been developed. Because autopsies indicated the children had not eaten for 18 hours before their death, police were inclined to the belief that thye had been slain by poverty-frantic parents.

In line with White's identification, police theorized that the woman and children left Boston by bus last Tuesday, intending to go to Pittsburgh; that they left the bus at Harrisburg, transferring to a private passenger automobile with a man; that the children were killed in Carlisel en route to Duncansville and that the murder and suicide in Duncansville climaxed the tragedy.

There were two developments indicating that the children were members of a family connected in some manner with the United States Army.

Army doctors said their vaccinations, two of them on the shoulder, are of the type given by army physicians.

A shirt found in the suitcase was identified as having been manufactured by a Napa (Cal.) company which makes shirts for army stations in Middletown, N. Y., and Washington, D. C.

Clothing worn by the children, according to a check of number found on it, was sold by a New York jobbing house and quite possibly to a Greater Boston retail store.

A child's pocketbook found near their bodies was manufactured in Providence.

The investigation turned to Boston at the request of Lieutenant James J. McElroy of the Pennsylvania state police.

Descriptions of the three children, together with details of the new clues, and orders to check every schoolhouse in their respective areas were broadcast by Boston police radio to 65 police cars.

Police were also ordered to inquire at hotels, restaurants, drugstores and similar places whether anyone had knowledge of three children being taken on a trip.

Check of all schools in Greater Boston was undertaken to establish whether three girls, light-haired, probably sisters, had been absent from classes for any cause since last Wednesda, .

BUS LINES CHECKED

Ten headquarters detectives checked with nine bus transportation lines having headquarters in Boston.

The radio order was sent out by Lieut. Lawrence Walt from Boston headquarters at 6 o'clock this morning. Later, Boston by teletype notified Metropolitan and State police of the search and also enlisted the aid of city departments in the Greater Boston area, as follows:

"We think these people were Boston people but possibly they were from an outside city or town and only left from this point."

MISSING CHECKED

William Ross, director of the Bureau of Missing Persons, began an immediate examination of his records.

The general message broadcast from Pennsylvania was:

"The police want reported any case of three sisters missing from classes tomorrow whether or not they had been absent last week.

"It is entirely possible that the persons responsible for these deaths gave plausible excuses for the girls absence from school."

That one of the dead girl's name was Norma was indicated by discovery of that name scrawled in pencil by a childish hand on one of three puzzle books in the suitcase. The other books had no names.

Another distinguishing clue was the fact that the oldest girl had an attack of scarlet fever "recently," but that the others apparently living in the same house, escaped the malady.

A box of face powder found in the bag was stamped "Mary Scott Rowland, N. Y. C." and "Hyde Park." Authorities here learned there were two "Mary Scott Rowland" beauty parlors in New York city and it was assumed that "Hyde Park" was the name of a brand of powder.

BAG LINKED TO TRAGEDY

The bag, definitely linked to the triple tragedy here by the discovery in it of three buttons, and a belt missing from the girl's coats, has woven into this hypothesis their circumstantial story of self-destruction of an entire family.

The only identity clue to the couple slain at Duncansville came from a hotel register in Altoona where they stayed Thursday night —the girls died Wednesday or Thursday—and the bag was found Thursday—gave the names of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gardner, Philadelphia (no street address).

MR. HEARST on Communism And Fascism

capable and the least creditable classes from getting control of government.

Fascism will only come into existence in the United States when such a movement becomes really necessary for the prevention of Communism.

We must not let it become necessary. We must not allow the Communists to get control of the machinery of government, and give our people a government based on class prejudice fortified by violence.

The proletariat, as defined by the dictionary, was the lowest order of citizenship in Rome.

It was composed of the citizens without property of any kind; and the reason they had no property was because they had the lowest intelligence, the least industry, and the least thrift.

The proletariat today is the body of citizenship least able to manage their own affairs and consequently least able to manage the nation's affairs.

This class should be the care and concern of government but government should not be the peculiar concern of this class.

The Communistic party today is largely composed of agitators with the greed for power, position, and property, but without the competence to acquire them except by criminal violence, and certainly without the ability or the will to exercise them for the general benefit.

The Communist policy is to substitute plunder for labor.

We Americans do not want to be governed unjustly and incompetently by a selfish class who have not the ability nor the desire to govern wisely and impartially.

We do not want to have to resort to a Fascist movement in order to prevent such misgovernment.

We do not want class government of ANY KIND.

We want MASS government.

We want government which will care capably and conscientiously for the interests of all classes.

Communism as actually in operation is government by a class, for a class.

Fascism is government by an opposing class.

American democracy is government by all the people, expressed through the will of the majority.

Let us preserve a democracy which is just to all.

Let us be alert to the dire menace of Communism which, as Lenin defines it, is "nothing else than power based upon force and limited by nothing—by no kind of law, and by absolutely no rule."

And let us realize that there is no danger of Fascism as long as there is NO DANGER OF COMMUNISM.

TROOP 'PURGE' SEEN AS NAZI FACTIONS RISE

By Associated Press

Berlin, Nov. 26—Rumors similar to those preceding the June 30 Nazi "purge" were heard with renewed insistence today because of a growing disaffection between the Schutz Staffel (picked guards) and the Reichswehr (regular army).

Each organization, enlarged and changed through the reduction of the brown-shirted storm troops, feels its "superiority" over the other should be recognized by Chancellor Hitler.

A number of observers agree Hitler will soon be called upon to choose between them.

Heinrich Himler, commander of the black-garbed S. S., has cabinet status and his organization is becoming increasingly powerful.

Nazi storm troops picked for the S. . are carrying into it, however, the rancor they felt when the storm troops were relegated to an inferior place after carrying Nazidom to power following the "Roehm revolt."

The Reichswehr, it is known, believes some of its traditional nonpolitical character was destroyed by the oath of fealty to Hitler made on their behalf, but that its superiority over a mere party group cannot be questioned.

Reports in reliable quarters indicated the enmity between the S. S. and Reichswehr has become acute and deep-seated. Himler secretly told his sub-leaders that the S. S. is the Fatherland's main arms bearer, that its members are training for any emergency and that they are ready.

Pleads Not Guilty in Police Death

Alex Marinakis of Grove street, West Roxbury, driver of the truck that yesterday killed Patrolman James Brickley at Beech and Washington streets, Roslindale, today pleaded not guilty to charges of manslaughter and driving so as to endanger in West Roxbury court.

His case was continued until December 12, as was bail of $2000. Brickley died while directing traffic after a fire in the Roslindale neighborhood Sunday morning.

CRIMSON ASKS OUTSIDE COACH FOR HARVARD

The Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily, in an editorial today asserts that Harvard tradition—a football coach from its own graduates—should be flung to the winds in replacing Head Coach Eddie Casey next season.

The college newspaper bemoaned the defeat of the Harvard team in the season that closed with a 14 to 0 lashing from Yale, but warned at the same time that the new coach should not install "a system which plays the almighty football on a sacred altar."

Head Coach Casey's resignation, predicted exclusively in the Boston Evening American several weeks ago, was in the hands of Bill Bingham, director of athletics, but had not been formally accepted when the editorial appeared.

The editorial opened:

"When a Harvard team loses all of its major games and can offer to its graduate and student supporters only victories over little Bates and New Hampshire and a temporarily paralyzed Brown, it is both natural and inevitable that there should arise a cry for a new deal at Soldiers Field.

"Certainly it is desirable to maintain this system of graduate coaching wherever possible but experience in every sport has shown that of necessity these comes a time when an able graduate coach is not available for the sport in question.

"When such a situation arises, it is pointless to cling to the tradition in the face of reality. Thus, in every sport save football Harvard has looked outside the lists of its alumni directory for leaders. There is no reason why it should not follow the same course in the case of football if the committee decides to change the present regime."

The editorial ended with a statement that said:

"Without any doubt this standard will prevent Harvard from achieving fame in the Rose Bowl —a fact that is little regretted. We are here to develop a broad cultural background rather than to win a place in the Who's Who of athletic annals. The one is incidental to the larger purpose of the other."

EX-COUNTESS CATHCART'S THIRD LOVE "ASHES," TOO

Love is just ashes once more for Lady Vera Hodge, the former Countess Cathcart, once barred from the United States for alleged "moral turpitude." She obtained entrance finally and wrote a play, "Ashes of Love," which failed. She is now in London seeking to divorce her third husband, Sir Rowland Hodge.

DIVORCE
COUNTESS VERA SUES RICH MATE

By Associated Press

London, Nov. 26—A petition for divorce by Lady Vera Hodge, who as Vera, Countess Cathcart, was once barred from the United States on the ground of "moral turpitude," was entered today in the court calendar for hearing tomorrow before Sir Boyd Merriman and a special jury.

Lady Vera is asking a decree from Sir Rowland Hodge the 75-year-old millionaire shipowner, who became her third husband September 30, 1930. He is expected to contest the action.

Lady Vera was Mrs. De Grey Warter. Her next husband was the Earl of Cathcart. They were divorced February 24, 1922, the earl naming the Earl of Craven as co-respondent.

'KING HUEY' LONG TAKES ROYAL TITLE

N By Associated Press

Hot Springs, Ark., Nov. 26—Now, he's "Huey I, King of the Ozarks."

The new title, self-conferred rested today on Senator Huey P. Long of Louisiana, who is here with Mrs. Long "honeymooning" after a marriage of 21 years.

The Kingfish explained it all before a laughing group of natives and visitors to this resort in the Ozark mountains.

"All this country here is Long territory," the Kingfish said, "so I am going to declare myself 'King of the Ozarks.' You have no doubt noted that from time to time American girls with oodles of money go abroad, looking the depleted stock of royalty over, select something they think they like, pay an enormous sum for it, obtain a title and they are satisfied.

"Well, I'm going to change all that and make it easier for those 'gals' to gratify their heart's desire without so much travel or worrying.

"An American girl who just must have a title can come and get one of those—fine American stock and a damn sight better than anything she can find abroad."

Among Boston's BEST DRESSED WOMEN
(NO. 1)—Mrs. Robert Farrington

Buys in U. S.
GOWNS MADE IN AMERICA FAVORED

By MARGARET D. O'CONNELL

First selection of the committee naming 10 of Greater Boston's best dressed women is . . .

Mrs. Robert Farrington, of Newton.

Although they are making no attempt to rate the best dressed, Mrs. Leland Powers and the artists, John Lavelle and John Whorf, comprising the committee, reached their first agreement on Mrs. Farrington.

So out I dashed to her home, at 183 Waverley avenue, Newton, to learn what she was wearing and her "best dressed" secrets, keeping in mind that Mrs. Powers insists upon clothes that reflect charm and graciousness, that Mr. Lavelle must have personality, simple costuming and a well rounded figure, and Mr. Whorf "clothing at all times thoroughly in keeping with environment."

Mrs. Farrington, sportswoman and musician, has them all.

We met just as she was leaving her home, perfectly attired for a crisp autumn morning.

In what?

A rough tweed suit the shade of raspberry red, checked in beige—attractive, sufficient, a little exciting.

Her soft wool blouse of raspberry had a flattering scarf which caught around the throat with a diamond pin.

Her accessories were all of a chocolate brown.

I thought the committee had made a grand start and told her so; she laughed, pleased as any woman might be.

Of course we talked clothes, mostly, and what blondes should wear, and keeping fit in order properly to wear clothes — and hobbies

"Paris? I asked, nodding towards the rasberry red.

Buys American

"Oh, no!" she exclaimed. "I much prefer buying my clothes in America to buying them in Paris.

"You buy them abroad and you stand hours clearing your trunks through the customs only to find the same models in the shop window at home. These same models, copied here, are much better adapted to the American figure."

There was a slight digression regarding the existence of such a thing as "the American figure," Mrs. Farrington convinced me and continued:

"There is no need for any woman to spend a lot of money on her clothes to be well dressed these days. The shops offer an infinite variety of lovely costumes at prices ridiculously low compared to five or six years ago.

"I do wish, however, that the shops would not buy from the same resources (shops, take note), but have special ones of their own so one would not have to slip ten with "oneself" opposite—the same model, but just a different shade.

Dress Secret

"If only we can get originality into our clothes at their present day prices it will be just perfect.

"I do think black by far the smarter color for the blonde, but somehow I prefer brown for myself, except in the evening. Then I like black and many of those sombre, stained-glass tones. They are so mellow and rich under electric lights.

"Hobbies? Well, I think my real hobby is music. But I do love tennis and play it right through the season until winter; then I play badminton."

EARLY DRESS SECRET

And what about that secret of best dressing?

"To be well dressed, one must first be in perfect physical condition. If one's eyes sparkle and the cheeks glow and the hair is gleaming and healthily looking, then one is in the right frame of mind to study oneself over so carefully, picking out one's type and costuming oneself in the most becoming manner possible."

(Mrs. O'Connell will reveal tomorrow the committee's second selection in its task of naming ten of Greater Boston's best dressed women.)

3 Kings, 3 Queens at Dinner Table
BUCKINGHAM TO MARK OPENING OF WEDDING

By Associated Press

London, Nov. 26—Three Kings—George of England, Christian of Denmark and Haakon of Norway—with their Queens, will sit down together tonight in Buckingham Palace at a dinner given by King George in honor of Princess Marina and the Duke of Kent.

The King and Queen of Denmark and Princess Waldemar arrived in London today for the wedding, which takes place Thursday. A busy round of private engagements faced Marina.

The first dinner party connected with the wedding will be held in the gorgeous white and gold state dining room of Buckingham tonight. Magnificent gold plate, one of the most costly possessions of the British sovereigns, will be used.

An altar service of solid gold will be used for the second wedding ceremony—the Greek orthodox—sealing the union of Princess Marina and the Duke.

This ceremony, much shorter and performed before only a select company of royal witnesses, will follow immediately the Church of England service at Westminster Abbey.

Priest in Palace

It will be solemnized in the private chapel of Buckminster Palace, built by Queen Victoria in 1843 as a conservatory.

The service, expected to occupy less than 30 minutes, will be solemnized by the Archmandrite of the Greek Church in London, Archbishop Germanos.

Preceded by the priest, singing a psalm and swinging an incensor, the bridal couple will enter the chapel bearing lighted tapers.

The priest places crowns on the heads of the bride and bridegroom, three times repeating these words:

"O, Lord our God, crown them with glory and honor."

First tasting the "common cup" and then giving it to the bride passes it three times to each of the participants, pronouncing a blessing of dismissal.

Ceremony Set Like Railway Timetable

By International News Service

London, Nov. 26—A time-clock at the door to Westminster Abbey to make sure that King George checks in on time seemed today to be the only preparation lacking to make the schedule for the marriage Thursday morning of Princess Marina and the Duke of Kent work out with the precision of a railway timetable.

Here's the program, as set by a much-harassed Lord Chamberlain, who is responsible for seeing that the wedding goes off with clock-like regularity. (Subtract five hours for Eastern Standard Time.)

10:15 a. m.—Guests of the king must be in the abbey.

10:35 a. m.—Foreign and diplomatic guests ti be in their places.

Archbishop of Canterbury and assistants to be in sacristy.

10:36 a. m.—King George probably hurried along a little by Queen Mary and the King and Queen of Denmark, and King and Queen of Norway, leave Buckingham Palace in state coach with royal escort.

10:44 a. m.—Bridegroom and Prince of Wales leave St. James' Palace and take positions at side of altar.

10:45 a. m.—Bride and father leave Buckingham Palace.

10:58 a. m.—Princess Marina arrives at abbey and walks up aisle on father's arm.

Margaret Sullavan
Brings Back Husband

Hollywood, Nov. 26—On Margaret Sullavan's last airplane trip to Arizona, in January, she came back to Hollywood with a black eye and a puffed cheek. A misdirected cast by a fishing instructor did that.

With her return to the movie colony today from another plane jaunt, to Yuma, Ariz., she had acquired a new husband. He is William Wyler, her director.

Miss Sullavan, in case somebody doesn't remember, is the onetime Harvard Cooperative Society clerk who made good in a big way in Hollywood after a stage debut in Boston. She was the star of "Only Yesterday" and of "Little Man What Now."

This wedding was really an elopement. Gossip in Hollywood had linked the star with John McCormick, former husband of Colleen Moore, and Jed Harris, the New York producer.

But Miss Sullavan proved definitely that neither had captured her heart when she and Wyler paid a flying visit on Justice A. E. Freeman, the "marrying judge" of Yuma. They flew back to Hollywood immediately after their marriage.

It was the girl star's second matrimonial venture. Several years ago she was wed to Henry Fonda, stage actor. They were divorced in October, 1933.

SHIPS SAFE YACHTS FOUND BY AIR SEARCH

Two disabled New England-owned yachts were located on the stormy Atlantic today with their total complement of 15 passengers and crews apparently safe.

The ketch Fayaway, carrying Mr. and Mrs. Richard P. Drey of Hartford, Ct., and their two children, Francis, 13, and Walter, 8, was found 25 miles off Norfolk, Va. by the coast guard cutter Naeoutin after a two-day air and sea search.

The schooner White Cloud, owned by G. Proctor Cooper, 3rd, of East Lee, with a party of 11 on a scientific expedition and treasure hunt in the Caribbean sea, was located 30 miles northeast of Puerto Rico by the S. S. Rangitata.

Among those on the White Cloud is Charles Edward Hill of Centre street, Brookline, a former Harvard student and Brookline high school graduate.

The Fayaway had been the object of an extensive search by air, out of New York, and the White Cloud was to have been sought by plane.

"Earned It"
Actor Asks Alimony From Gum Heiress

Hollywood, Nov. 26—Howard G. Wilson, actor appearing in a stage production here, said today he would sue for a divorce and $1,000 a month alimony from Evelyn Vane Adams, heiress to a chewing gum fortune. Wilson said:

"I earned it. Seven years of my life were wasted in society. It was always dinner, and golf and tennis, and Bermuda and Havana."

GRANDPA NOW Grew's Daughter Becomes Mother

Tokio, Nov. 26—United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew today became a proud grandfather.

A daughter, Alice Emily, was born to Mrs. Cecil Burton Lyon, youngest daughter of the Ambassador and Mrs. Grew.

KIMES GRANTED "VACATION" FROM JAIL

By Universal Service

McAlester, Okla., Nov. 26—Serving two life sentences for murder, Matt Kimes, outlaw, left the state penitentiary here with permission to go quail hunting.

Kimes, who has served seven years of his sentences, left the prison with the son of Sid White of Oklahoma City, his attorney, and also the attorney for Governor Murray.

The ex-outlaw was to do his hunting in the company of Attorney White.

Injures Mother

Lawrence, Nov. 26—A fire engine answering an alarm collided with a sedan driven by Stephen Tomaski, 18, of Camden street, North Andover. Mrs. Amelia Tomaski, 40, mother of the driver, was severely injured. The fire engine was temporarily disabled and the sedan demolished.

A BARREL IS COFFIN FOR GEM SALESMAN

By Associated Press

Columbus, Nov. 26—The victim of a mysterious slaying whose body was found in a barrel in Cincinnati was identified here today as Alvin Brunner, a jewelry auctioneer, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Police at once began a widespread search for Brunner's secretary to whom, a Columbus jeweler said he had given a package which Brunner had asserted contained $20,000 in diamonds.

Evidence uncovered by Columbus and Cincinnati police indicated Brunner was slain in Columbus and his body transported in the barrel to a private garage in Cincinnati, where it was found yesterday.

Police were aided in identifying the victim by Reinhard Merz, a Columbus jeweler, who also supplied the information concerning the diamonds.

DOUBLE PROBE OF NORTON AIR CRASH

Two official inquiries were underway today to determine what made William P. Melcher's plane tear apart as he was stunting over the Boltz Airport in Mansfield. Melcher and a passenger, 22-year-old Ruby A. Rand, were killed.

Melcher was 35, an automobile mechanic and a pilot of long experience. He lived in Sharon, with his wife, Violet, and their two small children.

Miss Rand, a jewelry designer, lived in Main street, East Norton, with her parents. She was engaged to be married in the spring. Saturday she celebrated her birthday anniversary.

Her fiance, Robert Freeman, accompanied the girl to the airport as she prepared for what turned out to be her last flying trip. Freeman is a Boston radio announcer.

The plane, piloted by Melcher, went into three tailspins and was wae coming up from a power dive, preparatory to looping, when the left wing ripped off and the ship dropped like a plummet into the woods at the Mansfield-Norton line. Its occupants died immediately.

Miss Rand had asked for a "thrill." She was quite an aviation enthusiast and had flown many times previously.

The accident occurred in full sight of Melcher's wife and Miss Rand's fiance.

Investigation of the affair was begun by Chief of Police Rufus H. Ring and Town Manager Harold H. Everett of Mansfield and by Police Chief Benjamin Scanlan of Norton.

Dies in Plane

Before the eyes of her sweetheart and her parents, this young woman, Miss Ruby Rand, 22, of Main street, East Norton, fell to her death as a stunting airplane in which she was a passenger crashed near the Norton reservoir.

ELOPING YOUTH DIES IN CRASH

Tragedy early today cut short an elopement when Edward H. Coulon, 21, assistant manager of the Hotel Touraine, was killed instantly on Worcester turnpike, near Natick, as he and Miss Jean LePaska, 19, of Suran street, Dorchester, were speeding to New York in his auto to be wed.

Miss Le Peska, Hotel Westminster cigarette girl, was seriously injured, but physicians at Framingham Hospital expected her to recover.

Through pain-twisted lips, she told of their shattered wedding plans. Her mother and Emile Coulon, Jr., brother of the dead man, were at her side. She said:

"We were on our way to New York. We were to be married today. I don't know how it happened."

The body of the boy, who was to have been a bridegroom, still in evening clothes, lay cold in death at Leonard Morse Hospital, Natick.

Police, reconstructing the accident, said that the Coulon car left the road near Willow bridge, Natick, catapulted across the reservation separating the two traffic lanes, rolled over and over along the opposite roadway and finally came to a splintering stop against the pole.

Coulon was the son of Emile Coulon, who operates the Westminster and Touraine Hotels.

Mrs. Emile Coulon, his mother, lies dangerously ill at her Jerusalem road, Cohasset, home, in such serious condition that relatives feared to break the news of her son's death to her.

Where Death Wrote Tragic Finis to Romance

One moment, a happy elopement party, a prosperous young Boston hotel man and his pretty cigarette-girl bride-to-be, bound for New York, a quiet wedding and a glamorous honeymoon. Next moment, a crash, a somersaulting car, a tangle of wreckage—and the prospective bridegroom dead, the fiancee seriously injured! Here's all that is left to tell the story. This maplunged from the Worcester turnpike near Natick, rolled over and over, and finally hit a pole. Edward H. Coulon, 21, assistant manager of the Hotel Touraine, was instantly killed. Miss Jean LePeska, 19, of Sudan street, Dorchester, was hurt. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

FOUR GUILTY IN GIRL CHARGES

Thomas J. Powers, former patrolman at the North street station, was found guilty with three others in Suffolk court today on charges involving two Lynn runaway girls last summer.

Findings of guilt on two counts against Powers, involving a girl of 17, and another 14, were returned in sealed verdicts that were opened by Judge Thomas F. Hammond.

Miss Minnie Cavaleri, in whose West End home the girls were harbored; Miss Cavaleri's brother Salvatore Cavaleri of Peabody, and Joseph Notto of the West End were the others found guilty.

SKYLIGHT GANG SUSPECTS HELD

Medford's "skylight gang" was believed broken up early today, with the arrest by two Medford patrolmen of five youths who were looting the Wilson Market on High street.

A long chase along High street, during which pursuing police fired six shots, resulted in the capture of two of the youths. The other three were taken later.

Patrolmen Eugene Coleman and William Sullivan were summoned to the store in their cruiser car by a pedestrian who reported seeing men inside. The youths apparently saw them, for they suddenly burst through the rear door and started to run.

Coleman and Sullivan captured Harry L. Parrault, 19, of Park street, and Charles E. Thoman, 21, of Williams street, both of Medford.

They were taken to headquarters for questioning and later police went to the homes of Michael Barbat, 21, of Ship avenue; Louis Brewster, 19, of South street, and Edward Fitzpatrick, 18, of Park street, all of Medford, and arrested them.

In Malden court, the five pleaded not guilty and their cases were continued.

Kill that COLD!

Don't Merely Coddle It with Half-Way Measures!

A cold is nothing to trifle with! It may end seriously. A cold, being an internal infection, calls for an internal treatment. It also calls for a COLD remedy—and not something good for a number of other things as well.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is direct and internal—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is sold by all druggists, 30c and 50c. Accept no substitutes.

WHAT 13 JUDGES SAY OF GLORIA DECISION

JURISTS AIR VIEWS OF DECISION

Gloria Vanderbilt to her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, allowing the mother, Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, to have the child only on week-ends, Christmas Day and during the month of July.

The opinions of other judges follow:

Superior Court Judge Rudolph Desort of Chicago, who hears at least a hundred child custody cases a week:

"Private court hearings breed suspicion and distrust. Courts, after all, belong to the electric masses. In the greater interest of justice the public has a right to know what transpires there."

"It conceivably may be that some testimony given in court could be so inflamatory or in nature so subversive to public morals that a private hearing might be desirable. But even under such a rare circumstances the press, representative of the people, should be admitted."

MOTHER COMES FIRST

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE JOSEPH SABATH, of Chicago, who has heard thousands of divorce cases involving the custody of hundreds of thousands of children:

"Speaking from my own experience it is my observation that if a mother is good enough to have the children two days a week she is fit to have complete custody.

"Child custody cases are one of the most difficult to try, but the law of nature and even the law of man says that a mother is entitled to the right to care for her child.

"Before a child is taken away from a mother, charges against the parent should be proved beyond all doubt and normal certainty, just as is done in criminal cases.

"I have followed that principle very carefully and I have even ruled in a few cases where the mother has been found guilty of misconduct that she still is a better guardian of her own child than a near relative.

RAPS PRIVATE HEARINGS

"I have done so because as Judge I have felt that the mother would endeavor to guide and protect the child from all pitfalls such as ensnared her.

"I am opposed to private hearings behind locked doors. I never have taken cases from the courtroom to my chambers except in an attempt to effect a reconciliation of the principals, and where that failed then the proceedings continued in open court, where the law plainly says they should be held."

JUDGE WALTER J. LARUY of Chicago, who has heard domestic relation and child custody cases:

"I do not want it to appear that I am criticizing the Judge in the Vanderbilt case, but it would seem to me that both parties should be given the same opportunity to present and refute charges made in court.

"If serious charges are made publicly and the refutation of those charges kept secret by order of court, then serious injustice to one party might be done.

SUPPRESSION HARMFUL

"In fairness to all parties a full public airing of charges would be better than suppression of all or part of the proceedings."

CHARLES J. MARGIOTTI, recently appointed attorney general of Pennsylvania:

"The decision is silly. If the mother is fit to have the child two days a week she is certainly fit to keep her own daughter for seven."

JUDGE RALPH H SMITH, of Allegheny County, Pennsylvania common pleas court:

"The right of the court to decide between quarreling parents or related over the custody of a child has never been seriously questioned."

LOVE & UNFITNESS

"It is the uniform policy of all the courts to consider as paramount the interest and well-being of the child and to award the custody to that person best fitted by moral background, financial ability, educational training, to give to the child not only the material things of life but the environment so necessary to its future happiness.

"I would never take a child away from its mother until its mother's moral unfitness had been proved beyond a possibility of doubt."

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE THOMAS F. GRAHAM, of San Francisco:

"It has always been my opinion that the best place for a child is with its mother, unless that mother has been proved beyond any doubt to be an unfit person to have custody of the child.

"Even a woman whom some might call a 'poor mother' will give to a child the love and affection that is so essential to the well being of every child, and which a foster parent or relative might not give.

MOTHER NATURAL PARENT

"Had the Vanderbilt case been before me, I feel—and my opinion is based on all that I have read—I feel that I would have allowed Mrs. Vanderbilt a more generous part in her daughter's upbringing, or I would have taken little Gloria away from her mother entirely."

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE JOHN J. VAN NOSTRAND of San Francisco:

"It is difficult for one court to sit in judgment on another court of the same status, but in the Vanderbilt case I will say this—that unless it can be clearly proved the welfare of the child will be jeopardized, the natural parent should be allowed ample opportunity for association with the child, and under proper conditions to have actual custody of it.

"The court's essential duty is to provide for the welfare of the child. A wise judge will consider carefully any order separating a child from its mother."

WOMAN GIVES VIEWS

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE THERESA MEIKLE of San Francisco:

"As a judge of the women's court, I read the decision in the Vanderbilt-Whitney case with a great deal of interest.

"A court's first consideration must be for the welfare of the child in a case such as this. It has been my practice in dealing with such cases to award the child to the mother unless she is definitely proved unfit, and if she is so proved, to take the child away from her entirely."

SUPERIOR JUDGE LEON R. YANKWICH, prominent domestic relations judge in Los Angeles:

"Justice Carew's decision strikes me as unfair both to the child and the mother of the child. "By all rules of civilized legal systems the first claim to the custody of a child is that of the mother. Even when a father is given the custody of a child upon his death, the mother automatically becomes entitled to the custody. Relatives have no greater rights than strangers.

DIVIDED CUSTODY BAD

"Either Gloria's mother was or she was not fit to have the custody of the child. Personally I would not take the custody of discharged servants brought to testify by a wealthy relative, as a basis for blasting a woman's reputation or depriving her of her right to have the custody of her child. More, there was no showing that any of the acts with which Mrs. Vanderbilt was charged in any manner affected the child.

"If they did, the judge should have deprived her entirely of custody and limited her only to visitation rights. If her conduct is a bad influence on the child, then she should not be allowed to have the child for two days a week.

"Aside from any other considerations divided custody is bad for the psychology of the child. Personally I have persistently refused to allow it. Often it is an easy way out, even in the case of two parents fighting for custody. But the child is the loser."

LACKS PARENTAL CARE

SUPERIOR COURT JUSTICE DUDLEY S. VALENTINE of Los Angeles:

"Justice Carew's ruling, which of course, was based upon evidence that I was unable to hear, is at wide variance with the practice in my court.

"My object in every domestic relations case is to place the responsibility of rearing a child on the mother, in the belief that the best interests of the child will be served. Only the best interests of the child must be considered, of course, but the mother shows interest in her child and can be made to release her responsibility if should she decide to separate them.

STANDS WITH MOTHER

"Had the judge awarded the child to her mother and also made her a ward of the state, with provisions that the mother must care for her personally, it would have been more just to the interests of the girl.

"What a mother may do outside the presence of her child is of less importance, so long as she conducts herself properly and with due care in her immediate relations with the child."

SUPERIOR COURT JUDGE ISAAC PACHT, of Los Angeles:

"It is not at all inconsistent for the judge to permit the mother of custody of her daughter for two days a week and also to place the girl in the care of her aunt, taking into consideration the fact that as long as the girl is a ward of the state she may at any time, and possibly in the near future be returned to her mother after the mother has been made to realize her responsibility.

"I make it a practice never to take a child from its mother unless she is absolutely unfit or contributing to its delinquency. However, there are cases where this must be done, and here there seems to be considerable evidence before the judge to warrant such a decision."

JUDGE WILLIAM H. BYRNE, Jr., of New Orleans:

"Offhand I would say that if the mother is capable of taking care of the child for two days, then surely she should be capable of taking care of her the other five.

"I personally do not agree with a split-it up-in-no-good for the child. This means she has no permanent home no opportunity for cultivating the friendship of children of her own age. The duty of a judge is to have the welfare of the child at heart. And he, much closer to the facts of the case than I, probably has good sound reasons for his decision."

UNFAIR TO GLORIA

JUDGE-ELECT ERVIN R. PALMER of Detroit:

"In studying press reports of Justice Carew's decision in the Vanderbilt custody case, I would ordinarily say that I disagree with the decision on the ground that if Gloria's mother is entitled to any consideration, she is entitled to the whole custody of the child.

"Naturally, it is difficult to give an opinion because it is necessary to hear all of the testimony in any case in order to properly qualify an opinion.

"It is a hard proposition to take a child from its mother, and unless it can be proven absolutely that the mother is unfit, and therefore not entitled to have any hand in the rearing of the child, I would say the mother should have full control.

"It occurs to me that the decision was unfair to the child in that giving the mother partial custody will give her an opportunity to interfere with the proper bringing up of the child—an opportunity to cause friction that, at least, will not be conducive to providing the child with a calm, unruffle life."

LOVE FOR PARENTS

CIRCUIT JUDGE MOSES HARTMAN of St. Louis, 16 years on the bench, during which time he has sat recently in domestic relations and juveniles court.

"I understand Judge Carew heard private testimony that was not printed in the newspapers. Not knowing the evidence, it is very difficult for one to say just what course he would have followed if placed in Judge Carew's place. Evidently what evidence that was brought before him convinced him that the mother was not the right person to have the child."

JUDGE GRAHAM JUDGE MEIKLE

C. J. MARGIOTTI JUDGE SABATH

Commenting upon the court decision giving Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt only two days a week custody of her 10-year-old daughter, Gloria, judges and high legal authorities throughout the country seem generally agreed that unfortunate features of the case have been the secrecy of the hearings and the apparent denial of a mother's rights, without clear and definite proof of unfitness. Among those expressing their personal views are Charles J. Margiotti, newly-appointed attorney-general of Pennsylvania; Judge Thomas F. Graham of San Francisco; Judge Joseph Sabath of Chicago, and Superior Court Justice Theresa Meikle of San Francisco.

JUDGE CAREW

Violence Spreads in Trolley Strike

Los Angeles, Nov. 26 (AP)—Widespread violence, marked by numerous beatings, the collision of three street cars that had been waylaid by pickets, and injuries sending 26 persons to hospitals, was charged to the Los Angeles railway and bus strike today, as the city officials made initial peace overtures.

Shots were fired into street cars and brickbats were thrown, shattering glass and forcing riders to the floor for safety, last night. Several car crews were beaten.

AIDA DONNINNELLI STAR OF OPERA IN AIR SPOTLIGHT

By N. F. T.

Listeners in Latin nations of South America, as well as the loudspeaker patrons from coast to coast in this country, particularly those fond of classic concert soloing, can hear Mme. Aida Donninnelli, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who singe tonight (WNAC) between 8:30 and 9 o'clock.

Selections characteristic of Cuba and regions to the south have been chosen by the celebrated soprano, the entrancing "Siboney" and Padilla's "La Violetera" to be featured. Josef Pasternack directs the orchestra throughout and makes known that the rythmic "Flying Down to Rio" will be one of the principal compositions his music men have in store for interpretation.

N. F. T.

TIMELY TUNE TOUCHES

An octet of mixed voices in Thanksgiving songs, such constitutes the thirty minutes (WEEI) from 8 to 8:30 this evening, where Morgan L. Eastman and his melody makers hold forth. Ruth Lyon, soprano and Cyril Pitts, tenor, occupy the leading vocalizing roles and have in mind to offer "Be Still My Heart" as a dramatized duet rendition.

Richard Crooks, now starring with the San Francisco Opera Company, comes to the 8:30 place over coast to coast facilities (WEEI) tonight. Among the songs he will waft into the trans-continental four winds, is that romantic "I Love Thee" gem, by Beethoven.

STELLAR STAGING

Excerpts from famous operettas, namely "Rose Marie" and "The Vagabond King" are ready and waiting for staging by the veteran "Gypsies" group (WEEI) on the stroke of 9 o'clock this evening. Frank Parker tenors "One Night of Love" and the well known "Somewhere a Voice Is Calling" for added attractions.

Rosa Ponselle puts her voice into space (WNAC) tonight, come 9 o'clock, blended against a background of Andre Kostelanetz orchestral accompaniment, featuring the intense "Card Scene" from "Carmen" along with the striking song story "A Dream" and the stirring "Rosary" by Ehrlebert Nevin.

COMING OUT OF ETHER

Actors of note hear the "mike" call ringing clear, latest of them being Lionel Barrymore, who really hasn't radioed anything at all, except a few appeals for charity and talks at picture patronage. Now he makes ready to do a dial bit, which might well have been his gripping impression of "The Copperhead" but it won't. It's a Christmasy portrayal, that of "Scrooge" and Christmas is the day of the re-enactment . . . Next Sunday, temperamental Tallulah Bankhead breaks through into space at the behest of that Sabbath afternoon theater hour, to give and give of her husky speaking style in a condensed conception of "Let Us Be Gay," the vehicle by means of which she won London play lovers to her personality . . . Mary Pickford is putting in some strenuous objections to studio audiences . . . Speaking of studio onlookers, the frantic waving of a placard flashed "applause" is how all the handclapping is enticed, almost as if those present were obligated to clap hands in return for the privilege of seeing the artists read off their lines. Even the staff announcers are coming to expect an ovation for delivery of each advertising oration.

WITNESS HIT IN BUTLER PROBE

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 26—The congressional committee on un-American activities believes "something looks rotten" in connection with General Smedley D. Butler's charges that he was asked to head a Fascist "putsch" in the United States.

"You can't get away from it, somebody is trying to shield somebody on something that looks rotten, and honest people don't do that," said Representative Samuel Dickstein, vice-chairman.

The statement was contained in a report of the committee on the financial transactions of Gerald P. MacGuire, $432 a month bond salesman who, Butler said, asked him to become the "the man on the white horse" in the putsch.

MacGuire, Dickstein's report said, "reluctantly admitted receiving $75,000 from Clark" which was handled for an "unexplained purpose" while MacGuire was working on a drawing account of $432 a month.

INSULL IS EAGER FOR NEXT TRIAL

By Universal Service

Chicago, Nov. 26—Samuel Insull, acquitted of mail fraud, was declared eager to face a second charge, which the government seemed hesitant to press.

His attorney, Floyd Thompson, announced Insull would demand early trial unless the justice department decides to squash pending bankruptcy indictment, on which United States Attorney Dwight Green was in confer with Attorney General Cummings two weeks hence.

While Green withheld comment, Washington dispatches indicated the charge may be dropped, as result of the acquittal in a supposedly stronger case.

Another test of public sentiment which the Insulls now believe has swung to them comes December 3 when Samuel's younger brother, Martin Insull, goes on trial in Cook County criminal court for alleged embezzlement of $344,000 from the Middle West Utilities Company to protect his brokerage accounts.

MANILA QUAKE WRECKS HOMES

By Associated Press

Manila, Nov. 26—An earthquake which lasted 36 minutes shook Manila tonight, wrecking numerous bamboo dwellings in the slum district and damaging a few downtown buildings. Police had no reports of any injuries.

The quake was declared to be the most severe felt here in several years. Power lines, windows of downtown buildings were wrecked. Several thousand persons rushed into the streets as the ground quivered.

At San Migue, Bulcan Province, panic stricken residents carried the image of a patron saint to a chapel.

The quake apparently was centered 35 miles southwest of Manila.

Mother Asks Bed Springs, Mattresses for Children

One mother writes that her children must sleep on the floor if some kind reader does not answer her plea for bed, spring and mattress. She would like a large bed spring, size two, and a three-quarter long length spring and mattress for each. She also asks for two double day bed mattresses and chairs.

Two women write that they are unable to obtain employment because of their advanced age. They need coats size 20 and 40 and dresses size 38 and 40.

A mother says she cannot visit her son who is away from home because she hasn't any coat. She takes size 40.

Because of ragged clothes one young man says he cannot get a job. He requests a suit size 40, an overcoat size 44 and wide shoes size eight.

A Jamaica Plain resident wishes clothes for boys two and four and for girls three and six. The same party is willing to swap coats for a girl of 16 and a girl of 22.

When asking for or giving clothes, please designate size and take particular pains to write addresses plainly. Some have been the losers for not having written their addresses plainly.

APPEAL DINNER TONIGHT

Necessity of supporting private charity without the aid or interference of government agencies will be stressed by speakers at the Citizens Appeal dinner tonight at the Copley Plaza Hotel.

The dinner will mark the opening of a drive for $150,000, sponsored by a large group of leading Boston citizens to enable the Volunteers of America to carry on their work of caring for the unfortunate who are not cared for by any other charitable institution.

Colonel Frank Knox, Chicago publisher, will be the principal speaker. Other speakers include Governor Ely, Governor-elect Curley and Mayor Mansfield.

"Point Valaine," the Noel Coward play heading this way for Christmas-time, is a tragedy. Lynn Fontanne's character is that of an innkeeper, and Alfred Lunt is cast as a bartender. "Point Valaine" begins rehearsals today in New York.

Irving Kaye Davis, author of "So Many Paths," which returns Norma Terris to the theater—to the Majestic specifically from a local angle—is not the new, untried playwright that one might picture from reading dispatches about the young man. There is mention made frequently of his other play of the season, "All Rights Reserved," playing on Broadway, but the Irving Kaye Davis writing pair is getting few paragraphs.

Having known and admired his persistent efforts as a scribbler for the stage these past ten years, this department recalls his courage in writing a full-length play that contained exactly one character. As the title is recalled, it was "Courtesan," and Elsa Shelley, wife of the playwright, undertook the staggering job of playing the part. There was another Irving Kaye Davis play written around a woman's prison. This was produced, too, London then claimed Mr. Davis, and our records lose him to sight for the past few years. He returns as blithe, as untiring, as optimistic as ever, and good wishes from those who have followed his career will greet tonight's world premiere of "So Many Paths." Ed Scanlon and Abe Cohn, two widely known men of the theater, are making their producing debut with "So Many Paths." Miss Terris is returning to the stage after being absent from the lists since the closing of "Show Boat."

Jack Benny in "Bring on the Girls" is the second Sam H. Harris production this season. His first was "Merely We Roll Along," and George S. Kaufman, co-author and director of "Bring on the Girls," was co-author and director of "Merrily We Roll Along." Two weeks at the Plymouth theater, where it opens tonight, has been awarded "Bring on the Girls" for the shaping process that authors, actors and producers welcome before a New York opening. When "Bring on the Girls" is launched in New York, producer Harris will turn to a staging of the Nikinsky biograph, dramatized by William Bayer. Paul Muni is director No. 1 for the starring role. Yet another Harris show is in the offing, too, with Irving Berlin and Moss Hart at work now in Bermuda on the music and book. This will take form as the season of "As Thousands Cheer," under the title "More Cheers." Whether Boston will see the Nijinsky show or "More Cheers" or both before Broadway, we shall find out when Mr. Harris gets in town today.

Many Bostonians who applauded Guy Josephson's portrait of South Boston when she appeared a few years ago as something of a child prodigy in amateur theatricals, will be pleased to know that she will bloom forth as real leading lady next Monday and Tuesday evenings at Repertory theater in "The Whole Town's Talking." Principle of the play will go to the Carney Hospital.

Former Paramount Executive Expects Later to Convert His Plays Into Pictures

Los Angeles, Nov. 26—B. P. Schulberg, a pioneer in the film business, goes to New York early next month to produce stage plays. B. P. is leaving Paramount after an association, on and off, of 18 or more years with this company. Of course his desertion of Hollywood won't be permanent. It couldn't be, he's too much a part of the film business. He expects later to convert his plays into motion pictures.

Sol Lesser is back from Europe, all set to put Harold Bell Wright's "A Man's a Man" on the screen. Mr. Wright sorta' disputed Sol's right to make a talkie from the story, claiming the Lesser company owned only the silent rights. According to Mr. Lesser, he won his case and proved his point. Should be a prescient for other companies who have wondered whether owning the sound rights gives them permission to make a talkie.

I am glad to see that Rochella Hudson is getting a break. I have seen her twice within a week, first in "Imitation of Life," where she does a very nice part as the daughter, and in "The Great Barnum." She has the makings of a real star and although she has been on the screen a long time, she has played only comparatively small parts. She has just been put into the Fox picture opposite Will Rogers in "Life Begins at Forty." Speaking of Will Rogers, he asked Irvin Cobb how he liked being an actor. Cobb replied, "It's not so hard on the brain but awful hard on the feet."

Chatter in Hollywood

The rumor is very hot in Hollywood that Enzo Fiermonte, handsome Italian prizefighter, who is motoring back to New York, planned to make a slip over to Phoenix, Arizona. The story goes that he had an idea of establishing a residence in Phoenix with an eye to getting a divorce. Max Steuer, famous New York lawyer who represents Mrs. Fiermonte (formerly Mrs. William Dick and before that Mrs. John Jacob Astor) had been paging Enzo for some days before he left town and it is more than likely that his trip to Arizona is with his wife's knowledge.

Mary Pickford long distances that she is leaving in a week for home. She has had a big offer to repeat her comedy on the radio but she hasn't entirely made up her mind. The work is hard and Mary's heart is not with the movies. But it's my opinion she will sign for her success is one of the sensations of radio.

Greta Garbo is the erring wife, and Herbert Marshall her stern mate in Somerset Maugham's famous novel, "The Painted Veil," which comes to Loew's State theater on Thursday.

Holiday Bills at Park and Howard

"Parisian Dolls," newest of the Minsky burlesque programs, opens tonight at the Park Theater with the popular Jerri McCauley, stage and screen favorite, heading the cast.

Dagmar, exotic dancer, who returned to America from a sensationally successful appearance in the name part of Paris, is another headliner, and appearing in featured roles in the big musical are Gladys Clark, Jerri Sargent, Oona O'Donell and Jackie Wilson.

The comedy brigade is headed by Jack Greenman, character comedian, and adding to the fun are Jimmy Dugan, Sid Fields, Herbert Harris, Ted Blair, Sam Weston and Eddie Atkins.

On Thanksgiving eve, Wednesday night, there will be a midnight show.

Opening tonight at the Old Howard is a new holiday week burlesque program, "Honky-Tonk," which stars the headline comedian, Fred Binder, in another of the big Independent Circuit shows. Lovely Joan Colette returns to the Howard in the leading feminine role, and others featured in the cast are Mary Ellis, Jewel Sothern, Mary Brown and Mabel Grusile. The comedy is in the capable hands of such favorites as Jim Devine, Ralph Walton, Maurice and Martin, and there is a chorus line of two dozen burlesque beauties.

On the screen is "Man's Castle," with Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young in the leading roles, and "Before Midnight," starring Ralph Bellamy and June Collyer.

Midnight shows are scheduled for Wednesday night, Thanksgiving eve, and Friday night.

Caravan Cast Held Over at Copley

The second week of the newly organized Caravan Players opens this evening at the Copley Theater, with another performance of Moliere's "The Would-Be Gentleman," with Jennette Dowling, who heads the group as manager, in the leading role.

In the supporting cast are Thayer Roberts, John Dawson, E. Elizabeth Langille, Oliver Wendell Holmes and Frederick Cornell. The play will be repeated on Tuesday afternoon and evening, and on Thanksgiving night.

Jennette Dowling

At the Wednesday matinee and evening performance the Caravan Players will give "The Taming of the Shrew," a version which has been announced as slightly modified from last week's presentation, which aroused considerable controversy.

Sarg's Marionettes

Tony Sarg's Marionettes open a week's engagement today at Tremont Temple, presenting "Faust, the Wicked Magician." Showings are to take place mornings at 10:30 and afternoons at 2:30 during the Boston engagement.

OFFICER SAVES GIRL IN PATH OF EXPRESS

As scores of spectators stood transfixed, Patrolman James F. Noonan accomplished a hair-breath rescue of Miss Elinor F. Elliott, 20, of Washington street, Winchester, from the path of an onrushing express train.

Miss Elliott had ducked under the guard gate at the Winchester grade crossing, thinking she had ample time to cross the tracks ahead of the train.

But as she stepped onto the tracks, one of her high heels caught between the planks, and she sprawled directly across the rails.

Noonan, who had shouted to her not to attempt to cross, went into action almost before she hit the ground. With no waste motion, he snatched her arm and yanked her to safety. The train roared by not a foot from her ankle.

Miss Elliott was scratched and bruised.

Hauptmann Duped by Fisch Forgery, Says Expert

By LOU WEDEMAR

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Eighth of a series of exclusive stories about the Lindbergh case.

New York, Nov. 26—Soon after Isidor Fisch died in Germany, Henry Uhlig, a friend from boyhood, returned to the United States. He brought instructions from Fisch's sister, Hanna, to find any money or property owned by Isidor in the United States.

He found nothing but debts. He went to Hauptmann and told him of his mission. Together they went over a lot of possessions Fisch had left with Hauptmann for safekeeping. They found nothing of value except a few furs, Hauptmann said.

"He owes me a lot of money. At least I have these furs."

HAUPTMANN WORRIED

Uhlig, with the glance of an expert, studied them, and asked how much Hauptmann thought they were worth.

"Fisch said they were worth $6 apiece. I have about 100. That makes $600—a little, but something."

Uhlig shook his head.

"They're not worth more than $1.50 apiece."

For the first time Hauptmann appeared worried, according to his friends. He denied Fisch would fool him, and showed a bill of sale to prove the higher value. The bill had been forged, Hauptmann exclaimed.

"I'm sure Fisch is worth at least $30,000, from what he has told me."

Uhlig said:

"Well, come and help me find it. He owes me $150, and he owes a lot of other people."

OPEN DEPOSIT BOX

They went to the law office of Louis Blitzer, the attorney who had met Fisch at Chrzanower society meetings, and asked him to help them open Fisch's deposit box. Hauptmann told him Fisch owed him money, and Blitzer remembers the amount as $14,000, not $7500. He has no written record of the amount, however.

This visit was on June 15, 1934.

Hauptmann and Uhlig went away, and did not return. Uhlig and the delicatessen-shop owner got the box open through the public administrator, and found nothing, it appears.

Now, Blitzer interpreted Hauptmann's visit and the supposed allegation that Fisch owed him $14,000 as an attempt by Hauptmann to set up, ahead of time, a defense based on that debt. He points out that one of the newspapers wrapped around the Lindbergh ransom money was dated three days later, June 18, 1934. This would indicate that the money was wrapped at that time—at the height of their search for Fisch's assets — by Hauptmann or somebody else.

MORE MYSTERY

At any rate, Hauptmann gradually came to the opinion, according to his wife, that Fisch had been "no good." The crowning blow to his faith in the dead man came when Mrs. Henkel's aunt admitted Fisch had borrowed some money from her, and failed even to give her a receipt.

There is another incident relating to the Henkels' friendship for Fisch which is clouded in mystery. Mrs. Heil, mother of Carl Henkel, was tricked out of $2000 by some unnamed attorney, and Fisch got part of the money back for her by threats of having the attorney disbarred, it seems. However, he failed to give the money to Mrs. Heil. Mrs. Hauptmann says:

"I told Richard about this, since he was arrested, and he wouldn't hardly believe it."

Hans Mueller, nephew of Mrs. Hauptmann, didn't care much for Fisch — didn't trust him, Mrs. Hauptmann said, and only saw him a few times.

Fisch also told Mrs. Hauptmann about having a key to an apartment rented by "a young couple," where he stayed sometimes, "when they were away." This young Fisch spoke, hasn't come forward. If any of Fisch's friends who know his "second self" could be located, a new and fairer picture of the "mystery man" might be given.

(Another article in this series will be published tomorrow.)

RACING VOTE IS DELAYED

GOSSIPERS BLAMED

The council had just met when Attorney Conrad W. Crooker, chief opponent of confirmation of the racing commission without a public hearing, was in a 30-minute conference with the Governor.

As a matter of courtesy he announced at the end of the conference:

"Anything that is to be said will have to come from His Excellency."

The governor had nothing to say. The Boston Evening American learned, however, that the proposed public hearing took up the entire 20 minutes. Governor Ely was understood to have been opposed to such a hearing and branded the opposition to his nominees as the work of "gossipers."

It was during that conference the names of General Cole's campaign committee were given the governor with a demand that they be summoned before the proposed public hearing.

Other names included were Charles Ely, brother of the governor; J. Paul Keefe, nominated as a member of the Boston licensing board; Walter E. O'Hara, millionaire owner of the Narragansett race track; Bayard Tuckerman, society horseman; Henry G. Lapham, head of Boston Garden; Edwin S. Webster, Jr., who was active in a "Yes" vote on pari-mutuel betting; Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves and Rep. Charles J. Innes, who filed a bill to bar out of state persons from licenses to conduct racing.

ADJOURN FOR LUNCH

Outside the council chamber sat Joseph Lincoln, private secretary to O'Hara; Billy Ames, O'Hara's publicity man, and Lawrence Bresnahan, office manager for the Cole campaign and prominently mentioned as a candidate for secretary of the racing commission.

Several hours after the meeting was called, the councillors adjourned for luncheon. They said they expected the vote tabulation to take much more of their time.

With appointments to be sent in, more than 35 other nominations up for confirmation, giving pardons, two understood to be lifers, and rumors of "deals" to place supporters of Lieutenant Governor G Bacon in state office, a lively session appears certain.

Serious charges, including an allegation that concern a reported $15,000 contribution to General Cole's campaign, were aired shortly after the appointments of the three commissioners two weeks ago.

Several of the councillors feel that the charges are too serious to be overlooked and will press for further enlightenment. This because of a belief that they should not be made public until proved, but further hearings, if decided upon, are expected to be held behind closed doors.

Councillor Daniel H. Coakley of Brighton, the only Democrat of the body, says he will vote for a hearing and can't see how his fellow members will be able to duck one.

At Bowdoin

"The Gay Divorcee," starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, with Alice Brady and Edward Everett Horton in featured roles, is the current screen attraction at the Bowdoin Square, where a double feature film program and five acts of vaudeville are billed for the coming week.

Angna Enters in Performances

For three performances only the noted American dance mime, Angna Enters, will appear at the Repertory Theater on next Thursday and Friday evenings, November 29 and 30, and on Saturday afternoon, December 1.

Miss Enters' repertoire presents 29 dance portraits, eight of them new to Boston audiences. The opening program on Thanksgiving evening, will include American Ballet, 1914-1916; David Dances Before the Ark, Pieque-Nique, Delsarte, Oh, the Pain of It (A very modern abstract), Vienna Provincial, Piano Music No. 4, Effeminate Young Man, Santa Espana del Cruz, Boy Cardinal, Holy Virgin Pursued by Satan, Aphrodite, and The Farmer in the Dell.

Concert Postponed

The concert of 18th century music for Harpsichord and Viola de Gamba by Putnam Aldrich and Alfred Zighera, scheduled for this evening in Jordan Hall, has been postponed until Wednesday evening, December 5. A slight injury to Mr. Zighera's finger necessitates the delay. Tickets for this evening's performance may be used on December 5.

Third Concert by People's Symphony

An enthusiastic audience filled Jordan Hall yesterday afternoon for the third concert of the People's Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Fabian Sevitzky. Benjamin De Loache, baritone, appeared as soloist.

The program consisted of the Vivaldi Concerto in D Minor; "Dirge," by the contemporary American composer, Mary Howe, played for the first time in Boston; two baritone solos sung by Mr. De Loache, and a special selection of several movements from the brilliant and celebrated Fourth Symphony of Tchaikowsky. The "Song of the Evening Star," from Wagner's "Tannhauser," sung by Mr. De Loache, found the audience particularly appreciative. Director Seitzky concluded the program with the "Hornpipe" solo from Handel's "Water Music."

The fourth concert of the series will be given on Sunday afternoon, December 9 and will include "The New World Symphony" by Dvorak. The first of the Sunday evening concerts, scheduled for December 30.

On Uptown Screen

The current program at the Uptown features "The Gay Divorcee," musical romance co-starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, and Irvin S. Cobb's "Judge Priest."

THANKSGIVING SUNDAY MORNING . . . the Charles as blue as the Mediterranean and amateur and plucky sailors braving the nippy air to navigate their little craft up and down the wide course . . . throngs pouring out of the churches on the avenue . . . and we mused on how much more of its old significance this Thanksgiving will have for a large majority of people . . . the change may be slight but it is, nevertheless, perceptible and those plucky ones who have sailed the wide course of life these past few years without being too deeply pricked spiritually by the sting of depression, must have given thanks from the bottom of their hearts yesterday and again on Thursday, for the optimism we feel on every side . . .

ELEANOR SWIFT

The former Nancy Adams and her new husband, Benjamin Patterson Bole of Cincinnati, will be seated at the family dinner party on Thursday at her parent's home in Milton . . . the bride and bridegroom are just back from a European honeymoon and will go on to open their new house in Cincinnati soon . . .

After the New Year, Mr. and Mrs. Channing Wells are going to Arizona to while away the first cold months of 1935 . . . they will have their daughter, Elizabeth, and their new son-in-law, Heywood Fox, with them for Thanksgiving . . .

Eleanor Swift's Debut

ON THANKSGIVING EVE, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Swift of 17 Commonwealth avenue will introduce their debutante daughter, Miss Eleanor, third daughter of the Swift household and already a popular member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . . The debut will be in the form of a ball at the Somerset with an ushers' dinner of about fifty guests also at the Somerset . . .

Many friends will come from out of town to honor this new bud including some sister debs from other cities, Miss Eileen Bramwell of New York, Miss Elizabeth V. Smith of Newark, New Jersey, Miss Annie May Henry of Chicago and Miss Nancy Buell of New York . . . Mr. Jack Huntress of Washington, D. C., and Mr. I. Wistar Morris, Jr., of Philadelphia, will also be here for the ball . . . and the ushers' dinner.

Miss Ruth and Miss Lucile Swift, sisters of the guest of honor, are also giving a dinner at the Somerset before the dance at which they will entertain about fifty young people . . . Their guest list contains several out of town friends including Mr. and Mrs. Williamson Pell, Jr., of New York (the former Mary Willetts), Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip, Jr., of New York, Count Giovanni Revedin, Italian consul in New York, Don Guido Colonna of New York, and Baron Paul de Schell of Washington, D. C. . . .

Mrs. Swift's niece, Madame Paul Gervais of Paris, will arrive on the Europa tomorrow and be here in time for the party . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Gustavus F. Swift, with Miss Marie Swift, are coming on from Chicago, and Mr. and Mrs. Huntington B. Henry are expected from Chicago . . .

The debutante attended the Winsor School in Boston and the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury, Ct. . . .

Many Attend Sunday Musical Treat

YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, at Jordan Hall, the Peoples Symphony Orchestra was heard in another of a series of Sunday concerts . . . a series which we feel is most worthwhile . . . The ensemble played as though inspired under the baton of Fabien Sevitzky and there was a large and friendly audience there to take advantage of an opportunity to hear REAL music at a very moderate cost . . .

A soft carneul cape draped over her shoulders and a smart little turban of black accenting her snow white hair, Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard of Cambridge was one of the most intent listeners in the audience during the beautiful "Evening Star" number . . . Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Hall, the latter in black, attended with their attractive niece, Miss Kathleen Hall, still celebrating the Yale victory by wearing a vivid blue ensemble . . . Mrs. Arthur Davison and Miss Phebe Davison, staunch friends of the Peoples Symphony, Mrs. Elizabeth Grant of Marlborough street, wrapped in mink, Mrs. A. Julian Rowan, and Mrs. Arthur Brattle Wells, all members of the committee sponsoring these concerts, were there in their accustomed seats . . .

Letting their fancy and imagination soar with the notes of the Symphony Number 4 of Tschaikowsky, were Mrs. Langdon Frothingham of Beacon street, with Miss Eugenie Frothingham, composer of unusual talents herself . . . In a brown stripped woolen ensemble Mrs. Edward Rose was accompanied by a friend, and others who enjoyed the program were Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Munroe of Brookline, the latter smart in black with scarlet bag, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Clapp of Brookline and Mrs. Arthur Hobson . . .

Tea Marks Opening of Office

SOME OF BOSTON'S most popular hostesses served in that capacity this afternoon at the opening of the new offices of the Birth Control League of Massachusetts in the building of the Twentieth Cenutry Club, at 3 Joy street . . . Mrs. Oakes Ames presided and for the enlightenment of friends and members of the League charts were shown to demonstrate the recent development of Birth Control work throughout the state and the various branches of the work were described by those in charge of each department . . .

Mrs. Everett Morss, Jr.

Tea was served by the following . . . Mrs. Charles Baker, Mrs. Richard L. Bowditch, Mrs. Walter B. Cannon, Mrs. William P. Everts, Mrs. James M. Faulkner, Mrs. H. H. Goodwin, Mrs. Leslie D. Hawkridge, Mrs. Weston Howland, Mrs. Leon M. Little, Mrs. Francis P. Magoun, Mrs. John M. McGann, Mrs. Everett Morss, Jr., Mrs. Henry W. Newbegin, Mrs. Wiola R. Pinanski, Mrs. Thomas M. Storrow, Mrs. Margaret L. Woodbury, Mrs. E. Sohier Welch, and Mrs. Irving E. Bailey . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Carter of J. P. Morgan, in Paris, have recently arrived to spend the holiday season with Mr. Thomas C. Thacher, Mrs. Carter's father . . . They are accompanied by their daughters and will be here until after Christmas.

Dance in Cambridge to Benefit Children's Hospital Fund

NO CHRISTMAS SPIRIT is lacking in the group of enthusiastic young collegians who are planning "Children's Hospital Day" and the subscription dance for next Friday evening, at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge, with Miss Virginia Prout, veteran chairman, assisting Messrs. John C. Cutler and Francis Campana, in charge.

The Misses Madeleine Joyce, Helena Crosby, Isabel Bland, Dorothy Bevan, Eleanor Vanderhoof, Janet Greene, Kay Eagan, Mary Farrell, Grace McGlinchey, Arlene Gallagher, Hilda Swett, Aurelia Pheasant, Frances Mahoney, Rita Sullivan, Margaret Walsh, Elinor Fagan and Elizabeth McDonald are members of the committee. Ushers will be Messrs. William Prout, James Aleta, Russell Bletzer, Maynes Fitzgerald, James McCarthy and Wendell Roche. Patronesses are Mrs. William C. Prout, Mrs. Nelson R. Vanderhoof, Mrs. Francis Campana and Mrs. John Gallagher.

MISS VIRGINIA PROUT, above, who is in charge of the subscription dance which will be held next Friday at the Hotel Continental in Cambridge for the Children's Hospital.

Charity Bridge

TO BENEFIT CHRISTMAS baskets, the annual charity bridge and whist of the Philomathela Club will be held on Monday, December 3, at the Hotel Westminster, under the direction of Mrs. Frank A. Regan, assisted by Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts, president of the club.

Mrs. Frank A. Sullivan, chairman of the prizes, will be assisted by Mrs. William J. Brophy, Mrs. William A. Bannon and Mrs. James T. McDonough. Members of the luncheon and bridge committee include Mrs. David Gentles, Mrs. Joseph M. Kirby, Mrs. Charles Hall, Mrs. George Flood and Mrs. Edward J. Downey. Chances will be sold by Mrs. Daniel J. Holland, Mrs. John Brandin, Mrs. William McGee, Mrs. Daniel J. Coveney, Mrs. John H. O'Neill and Miss Sarah Lamb.

THE LOUIS XIV BALLROOM of the Hotel Somerset will provide the setting for a Christmas bridge afternoon, for members of the Dorchester Women's Catholic Guild, in aid of its basket fund on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 1. The calls for assistance are increasing, and officers and members are planning for a record attendance.

In Show Cast

THE ROSTER OF CHORUS girls and boys for a day, when the "Red Mill" comes to town on Friday evening, staged by the Preparatulis Club of Boston, at the Boston Opera House, will read as follows:

Flower girls: Marguerite Grant, Mary O'Shea, Grace Hoar, Leona Kelliher, Eileen Guthrie, Katherine Finnegan and Mary Lynch. English girls: Hazel Donehey, Kathleen McNally, Helen Lafferty, and Marjorie Tobin. Waltz vlog number includes: Bowery girls: Gertrude Ryan, Ellen Cullen, Alyce Vallely and Dorothy Loughran. Fifth avenue girls: Margaret Kendrick, Beth Kenney, Marguerite Barry and Theresa Murphy. Helena Butler, Flora Gleason, Kay Harriman, Cornelia Newell and Mildred Healy comprises the singing chorus. Gendarmes are Joseph Spellman and Henry Lynch. French boys: Francis Talbot, Charles Griffin,

Ursula Coues Heads Group

MISS URSULA COUES will be assisted by a prominent group of last year's debutantes in her efforts to dispose of a block of seats for the performance of "Toto," the world's most famous clown, who will appear at Symphony Hall on Saturday morning, December 1, at 11. Miss Coues and her assistants comprise the junior committee of the New England Kurn Hattin Homes, the beneficiary of the receipts from the sale of the seats.

Miss Polly Gotter, Miss Helen Marshall, Miss Katherine Baker, Miss Mary Jane Dewey, Miss Jean Fuller, Miss Eleanor King, Miss Dorothy Knowles, Miss Evelyn Weatherbee, Miss Caroline Oveson and Miss Virginia Telman are the diligent young workers.

Mrs. Margaret E. Rideing of Brandon Hall, volunteer secretary of the homes, will have charge of this undertaking. The profits derived will aid in the work accomplished for homeless boys and girls of the New England states.

Tickets may be secured from Miss Coues, 12 Monmouth court, Brookline, or from Mrs. Rideing at Brandon Hall.

Charity Club Holds Fete

THE WOMEN'S CHARITY CLUB, owners and operators of the Massachusetts Women's Hospital, held a fashion show, bridge and tea this afternoon in the recently opened Casino of the Hotel Brunswick.

Mrs. Howard T. Spaulding of Belmont, chairwoman of the committee in charge of entertainment, arranged for the excellent musical program which was presented by the Dorothy Curtis String Trio. Mr. Lawrence Thornton, prominent soloist, sang a number of songs.

An interesting feature of the program was the modelling of an old-fashioned bridal gown in contrast to a wedding dress of the present day.

Chatty Notes of Social Circles

MRS. ROBERT H. STEVENSON and Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Mathews of Chestnut Hill are guests at the Plaza in New York.

THE HARVARD-YALE game, with its attendant parties, attracted many Bostonians to New York for after the game celebrations. Included among them were Mrs. Edward Page, a guest at the Madison; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Pervere, of Commonwealth avenue, Mrs. Reginald Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Holman, Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Holmes Talbot of Boston, guests at the St. Regis, and Mrs. Eunice L. Bullard.

Button-On Rib-Knit Sweater of Svelte Young Lines

HERE at last is a sweater that can usurp the place of the beloved cardigan, because it is much smarter, yet offers the same advantages. Notice its deft fitting, the sleek ribbed lines, the raglan shoulder, and the utterly new and charming neckline. What a smart girl couldn't do with an assortment of scarfs—tucking them in and out, the weirder the angle and knot, the better. As well as other important details, we triumphantly offer you information on where in Boston the exact buttons the photographed model has may be purchased! Lead Directing Slam Double Is Fine Call

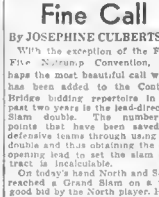
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

With the exception of the Four-Five Notrump Convention, perhaps the most beautiful call which has been added to the Contract Bridge bidding repertoire in the past two years is the lead-directing Slam double. The number of points that have been saved by defensive teams through using this double and thus obtaining the only opening lead to set the slam contract is incalculable.

On today's hand North and South reached a Grand Slam on a very good bid by the North player. However, the East player, who had overcalled early in the bidding, promptly doubled the grand slam bid and as a result his partner, instead of making the natural opening, which would have enabled the declarer to spread his hand, made the lead which would set the contract.

North, Dealer.
North and South, vulnerable.



The biddings

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♡	Pass
Pass	Double (X)	Pass	Pass

(1) Although this bid by North is a rather startling one in that it jumps from two to seven without stopping off at any way stations, in my opinion it is justified.

On West's vulnerable club overcall it seems to North that there can not be much duplication in the hand, and that South is probably has some sort of spade fit (i. e. his outside strength. Even without a spade honor in the South hand the slam contract can probably be fulfilled if South holds a singleton in the suit, and this seems a definite possibility in view of North's length. North decides that there is really no way of ascertaining whether or not his partner has a singleton spade, and he accordingly gambles on seven immediately, feeling that there is at least a three-to-one chance that his partner's hand fits in some way.

(2) East of course feels reasonably certain that a spade opening will defeat the contract as it seems most unlikely that South is void of the suit also. East knows that if he does not double, his partner in the interest of safety will open a club. By doubling East is asking for an unnatural lead.

West's decision was not close. Of course he immediately discarded a club lead or a trump lead as possibilities, and, knowing that the North player was not a wild bidder and accordingly was a shape, certainly marked with the diamond Ace, he also decided against a diamond lead. Of course it is quite possible that East was void of diamonds but that seemed very unlikely to West. Where the case was that the opponents would probably have bid that suit. Since North had bid spades and on his jump to seven was probably marked with a freakish distribution including a long spade suit, West quite properly finally decided that his partner's double was predicted on a spade void, particularly since spades were the only suit outside of hearts which the opponents had bid.

Add Honey to Basting Liquid

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast over Station WAAB.

NO SHORTAGE of turkeys this year, say reports from the country where the big birds strut and gobble. And certainly no shortage of appetite for roast turkey dinners

Year by year we improve our ways of doing things, even of roasting turkey. A new idea, a new trick, a new suggestion—these are the things that keep cooking a fascinating business week after week.

How big shall our turkey be? Shall we choose hen or tom turkey? How much dressing will be needed to fill the bird? How long should it be cooked to reach just that perfect stage of juicy, tender lusciousness that spells perfection?

HEN OR TOM

These are the questions asked most often.

As for size, ¾ to 1 pound of turkey, as purchased, for each person to be served, is a good allowance. "As purchased" means undrawn, and with head and feet on, as the birds are shown in the market. Both hens and toms are good, the former usually having a wider, deeper breast than toms.

In some markets the hens are sold at a slightly lower price than toms. If there is any difference in meat quality it is so slight that few people can detect it.

In making stuffing for turkey it is usually quickest to weigh the ingredients, since rather generous quantities are needed. According to Miss Belle Lowe of Iowa State College, a 19-pound turkey requires 2½ to 3 pounds of bread (2 large loaves), 1 pound of butter or rendered turkey fat, 1 pound of blanched almonds, ½ to 1 pound of sliced celery and minced celery leaves. A 10-pound turkey requires 1¼ pounds of bread, ½ pound of butter or rendered turkey fat, ½ pound of sliced celery, ½ pound blanched almonds. These figures are for a celery-almond stuffing, but the amount of bread is a good basic figure, and oysters, chestnuts or other preferred ingredients may be substituted for the celery and almonds.

UNCOVERED PAN USED

Since many modern households do not have a roasting pan large enough to hold the turkey comfortably, a satisfactory method has been developed for cooking the turkey in an uncovered pan. Any large flat pan will do very well. So will the broiler pan. Put the stuffed and trussed bird in the broiler pan and put the pan into the oven on the lowest rack.

In order to prevent drying out of the meat and consequent toughening and hardening of the fibers, cover the turkey with a flour paste. The bird browns beautifully under the paste, while at the same time the skin remains tender and the meat juicily moist.

A paste made of 8¼ cups of flour and ½ to ¾ cup of milk or water is sufficient to cover a 17- or 19-pound bird. At the end of the cooking period the paste is removed. During cooking the bird requires no watching or basting.

If basting the turkey, however, allow ½ cup of fat to one cup of water for the. One tablespoon of honey added to this liquid will give a golden brown color to the skin without sweetening it in any way.

Three Astringents Accomplish As Many Different Beauty Miracles

By Juliet Shelby

EVERYONE HAS HIS OWN WILD ideas about preventing a shiny nose. Some believe and firmly, that an extremely oily or red nose is due to faulty digestion or circulation, and that therefore little to be done about it, except by indulging in brisk walks and daily hours in outdoor exercises.

Others will tell you that they have successfully slowed down the tiny over-active oil glands with an application of a very special astringent, and that almost simultaneously acquired a dull, mat-finished nose as a reward. An astringent that contains stimulating as well as toning properties is almost sure to banish excessive oiliness in due time.

Among three lovely aids to beauty are three face lotions—each for a different type of skin, but all fruits of long and careful research.

One ether tonic makes a shiny nose impossible. It is especially beneficial for the oily skin and should always be used before powdering. Its action on the oil glands tends to refine the coarsened skin pores. The second is an astringent for the skin. It has soothing antiseptic properties, and if you have searched in vain for a lotion to use after a cold-cream—one that is efficacious without giving your skin the slightest irritation—then this lotion is for you.

The remaining brew has the refreshing, lovely fragrance of water lilies. I am told that it is made from an old formula. Its creation was for the primary purpose of restoring freshness to a tired face. And if that isn't reason enough for its popularity, I can't think of what would be! It is a skin tonic and liquid cleanser with astringent qualities, and you use it after the softening touch of cream.

If you choose the lotion best suited to your particular skin condition, I feel sure skin-happiness will be yours.

If you are interested in learning the name of these skin lotions and where they can be bought, call Miss Shelby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston

Brighten Hair

Question: Although my hair is naturally blonde, I have been forced to use peroxide lately to keep it from looking drab. It has been growing darker the last few years. What can I do to bring back the natural sheen?
H. F., Brookline.

Answer: It is only natural for your hair to grow darker as you grow older. Peroxide when used correctly will lighten the hair, but there is always the danger of overbleaching which of course, destroys the shafts of the hair. When peroxide is used, the application must overlap the last one. Conditioning must go on all the time. Have a hot oil friction the night before the shampoo, and plenty of brushing to make the hair shine

GIVEN IN MARRIAGE —:— By Adele Garrison

Avis, thwarted in every one of her schemes to spoil the wedding of Noel and Mary, faces one more defeat.

CHAPTER 202

NEVER IN my life have I known a person so hard to discourage as is Avis Arlen, when she has set her heart upon anything. Her persistence in getting her own way in things that cater to her vanity would surely work wonders for her if applied to matters worthy.

I had made this mental comment many times, but never did it appear more vividly to me than when she turned to Marion and Carolyn with the query, "Won't you have to ask your mothers before you go?"

Her mental processes were fairly clear to me; indeed, to anyone who had observed her to any extent. Failing in her scheme to separate Noel and Mary, she had also been thwarted in her subsequent determination to upset the wedding arrangements and to make the bride and groom as uncomfortable as possible. Thanks to my own vigilance, and to that of Harry and Lillian Underwood, the wedding ceremony had gone off without a hitch, and I now rejoiced in the thought that, because of a clever disguise and Mary's inimitable mimicry, the young couple had been able to get away without running the gauntlet of teasing usually suffered by newly married couples.

AVIS FAILS AGAIN

For a few minutes of that hectic guarding of Noel and Mary against the schemes of Avis Arlen I had felt genuinely sorry for the girl, because I thought she was actually suffering from thwarted affections for Noel. But if there had been any remnant of that feeling left in my mind, it surely would have vanished when I saw the determined attempt she was making to get with Ronald and Bob upon the chase after Noel and Mary, without having Marion and Carolyn present.

The rebuff from Bob, when he had responded to Carolyn's urgence that Avis should go by saying that neither he nor Ronald would stir without Marion and Carolyn, had not fazed her, as Dicky would put it.

OFF FOR THE CHASE

Accustomed to deceive her own mother whenever she wanted anything beyond Mrs. Arlen's most indulgent regime, I knew that Avis was counting gleefully upon a refusal from Mrs. Brixton and Mrs. Underwood to let their daughters go upon the chase after Mary and Noel, when she, as she patiently thought, had forced their hands by asking if they did not have to get their mothers' consent to the expedition

I could have caroled a peana as Lillian spoke behind me.

"They already have asked their mothers, Avis," she said sweetly. "Mrs. Brixton and I gave our consent hours ago for a chase, if you young people don't go too far."

"What would you call too far, Mrs. Underwood?" Bob wheedled hopefully. "Patchoguey"

Lillian gave him a dubious grin.

"It's rather a large order," she said, "but go to it."

"Hooray!" Bob caught Carolyn by the arm and rushed from the room. I saw Marion nudge Dorraid, and knew that it was by her compulsion that he caught Marion's hand in one of his and that of Avis in the other, and rushed from the room.

A LAST ATTEMPT

Lillian looked after them with knitted brows.

"A cobra coiled, that one," she said. "I'd like to have the skinning of it."

"Perhaps you will, some time," I said, laughing at her viciousness. "Just now, let's go and see what's doing."

We reached the driveway to find them all gathered in "razzing" Hank and Bill for their failure to recognize Noel and Mary in the garments of Mr and Mrs. Tyler. Lillian and I could plainly see that their expectations of catching Noel and Mary were low, and that the fun of the drive through the moonlight was what appealed to them.

I came to the rescue of Bill and Hank by telling the others what a marvelous performance Mary had given, and then listened with amusement to their discussion as to how seven people were going to pile into a small car. But my amusement ceased when Avis said,

"Why couldn't Bill and I take the runnabout?"

Mother-in-Law Introduction

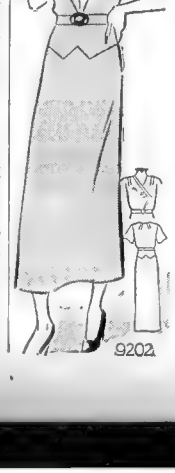
By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in an embarrassed position regarding the use of the word "mother-in-law" in an introduction. Is this improper? "Mr. Jones, I wish to introduce you to my mother-in-law, Mrs. Smith"? I have been reproved for doing this. PERPLEXED.

There is a very definite feeling against using the label of "in-law" in an introduction. And it is indeed far more tactful for a woman to introduce her husband's mother as "my husband's mother, Mrs. Allen," than as "my mother-in-law." The introduction sounds so much more gracious without that "in-law." "Mr. Jones I want to present you to my husband's mother, Mrs. Allen."

Frock Comfortable for Work



By MARIAN MARTIN
PATTERN 9202

Housewives of experience are always on the lookout for frocks that are as comfortable to work in as they are becoming to wear. That's why they'll like this slimming dress. There's not a button to mar the smooth perfection of the skirt's trim lines, nor a ruffle to catch and tear as you zip your way through your morning duties. The sleeves are cut gracefully full and shoulder tucks allow plenty of room in the bodice. Then for a bit of intriguing detail—there's the trim bodice closing which may be opened into petal little contrasting revers or worn buttoned up into a smart point!

Pattern 9202 may be ordered only in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 3¼ yards 36 inch fabric and ⅝ yard contrasting.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each MARIAN MARTIN pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

Send your order to Boston Evening American Pattern Department, 232 West 18th street, New York, N. Y.

Home Elevators

HERE is some especially cheering news for families that includes an aged person, a convalescent or one afflicted in such a way that stair climbing is painful or dangerous. Residence elevators, once found only in millionaires' residences, are now being made by a leading manufacturer at a cost no greater than that of a good automobile. The installation is said to be a simple matter, requiring surprisingly few changes in the home. Through the Home Owners' Loan Association it is possible to have the cost of the installation financed.

Marrying After Wild Party Brings Vain Regrets

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

TO TAKE one's troubles to one's mother is, I admit, the most old-fashioned advice that can be given to an unhappy and distracted girl. Parents, as we know, are pretty much out of the picture nowadays.

Mothers are supposed to be simple creatures with whom it would never do to trust a serious secret, and fathers are supposed to exist as conveniences to borrow money from, if your luck is good.

My own feeling, however, happens to be that parents are still pretty useful relatives, as they always have been, and I hope to persuade Betty X. to agree with me.

Betty, poor girl, is in agony of indecision from which she begs me to rescue her. She writes me:

"You'll think it is queer for a married girl to write you for help. When you are married people think that is an end of your problems; they think your fortune is told.

"Well, though I am only 17, I have been married four months and my troubles are terrible.

ON IMPULSE

"You see, I went to a party and there was a lot to drink. A boy I had never seen before made love to me, and I thought I liked him.

"The end of it was that this boy and I drove into the next state and got married in the early morning.

"It was easy to explain to my parents why I didn't come home that night. A girl friend helped me out. Since then there has never been anything to explain.

"I keep writing to this boy I married, but his answers would make you sick. Of course he wishes it had never happened, and so do I.

"My girl friends tell me I ought to go to his parents and tell them about the marriage, and that the parents must support us both.

"They could afford to, but the boy himself is in college and has no money. Do you think I ought to force this?

STRICT PARENTS

"I would hate to have my own parents know the truth, because they try to be rather strict with their children and have us well brought up—you know what I mean—and they would think it was a scandal that I got married the way I did.

"They even disapprove of drinking—that is, drinking too much. So there's a lot I'd have to own up to, and what would be the result? My father might throw me right out of the house. But why should I keep on chasing up a boy who won't have anything to do with me, even if he is my husband, and why should I even stay married to him? For heaven's sake, Miss Fairfax, give me some good straight common sense on this question. I just cry all night about it."

Now, this case isn't a tragedy, by any means. It merely needs some competent grownup handling.

And I hope the grownups involved will feel that the unhappy children, who tied themselves together with a legal knot, have already repented sufficiently and aren't in need of further disciplining.

Betty must tell her story to her own parents as soon as she can summon the necessary courage.

When they recover from the shock, they will communicate with the boy's parents, perhaps make a quiet announcement of the marriage, and then proceed either to annul it or to arrange for a divorce.

After the flurry of gossip has subsided and Betty realizes that her life isn't ruined, and that she still has her parents' affection, she can forget all about this episode and start afresh.

New York probably will have a sales tax, and is assured by Aldermanic President Deutsch that it "will not hurt." You pay it, but do not know you pay it. Mayor LaGuardia, who once specialized in Congress as an anti-sales tax man, will sign a sales tax bill if it is put before him.

He has 400,000 New York families on his charity list. It takes about $20,000,000 a month to feed them, pay their rent and gas and electric light bills, and he says truly "the sixty-odd millions that this city must raise cannot be picked out of the air."

GULF NO-NOX ETHYL AVIATION GRADE★ GASOLINE

with 6 points of superiority

and at NO INCREASE IN COST

IF YOU wanted the very best motor fuel today that money could buy . . . What grade would you ask for? . . . Where would you go to get it?

To answer both of these vital questions for the owners of new and old automobiles, Gulf announces No-Nox Ethyl Aviation Grade Gasoline available today at Gulf stations and dealers at no increase in cost!

Almost everyone knows that there has always been an especially fine grade of gasoline for airplanes . . . but up until now that grade has never been available to motorists with high compression ratio motor cars. Now it is . . . Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Aviation Grade Gasoline!

★ WHAT IS AVIATION GRADE?

Gulf No-Nox Aviation grade is the finest motor car fuel available, regardless of price. Its high octane rating has been further increased. Its distillation characteristics conform to those of United States government specifications for aviation gasoline.

★★ WHAT ARE THE SIX POINTS OF SUPERIORITY?

1. Quicker starting
2. Quicker warming up
3. Better acceleration
4. Less crankcase dilution
5. More available power
6. Increased anti-knock properties

This new Gulf No-Nox Ethyl Aviation Grade Gasoline will give you quicker starting on cold mornings because it is more volatile. It will warm up your engine faster . . . give you more available power . . . get you away faster in traffic . . . give you more anti-knock power on hills . . . and more economy for city driving!

It is an ideal motor fuel for winter . . . and there is no increase in cost.

Simply look for the "Sign of the Gulf Orange Disc", identify it, drive in and say: "Fill up my tank with that new No-Nox Ethyl Aviation Grade Gasoline."

You may not be able to fly with it in your motor car, but you'll feel like you can!

From year to year during the past few years, the tendency in design of automobile motors has been towards higher compression ratios to a point where today gasoline must have high anti-knock properties in order to give maximum fuel performance. The approach of winter weather makes necessary a further quality—quicker starting! Gulf's new No-Nox Ethyl Aviation Grade Gasoline combines both of these essential qualities with four others to meet the present demands of motorists and approaching winter weather. Try it!

ROBERT E. ROGERS

If it be true, as an esteemed contemporary appears to hint that the B. B. C., the British Broadcasting Company has issued a rule that once a joke has been used it must forthwith be so designated and not used again, it seems to me that the B. B. C. is even more puritanical than Joseph Hergesheimer made it out to be in an article published last summer.

Robert E. Rogers

He felt that it was hard on the British public to have to listen to [illegible] music most of the time, to have their demand for light music requited with only Gilbert and Sullivan and the old Gayety Theater music of the era of "The Geisha" and "The Circus Girl" and to have only a limited amount of dance music for dance purposes.

Nay more, you will remember that Mr. Hergesheimer allowed that the B. B. C. had decided that comedians didn't go so well over the air, or that "spoken wit" did not lend itself to radio presentation.

One gathered from Hergesheimer that British wit had to be reinforced with some baggy pants, a Poodles Hanford wig, a pair of slapstick shoes and a seltzer siphon, if the British public was really to enjoy it.

Can't Take It

But all that seems liberal in comparison with the new ruling. The ukase would seem to imply that the B. B. C. is being bored by too constant repetition of a few gags.

You will remember that there is only one great source of reception over there. Supposing the B. B. C. had the same jokes coming over week after week from two great chains containing hundreds of acts, not to speak of four local stations which keep a strict eye on what the chains are doing and try to do likewise.

It seems to me the British public is losing its stamina, that it is getting so it can't take it. Let them think of the splendid and ancient history of their "London Punch," which, as Ralph Waldo Emerson once said, prints precisely one capital joke a week.

Perhaps it is that joke the B. B. C. is using and the offence is considered rather in the light of lese-majeste rather than mere boredom.

The English being more homogeneous in race and language are probably limited in their source material for wit and humor. They have always seemed satisfied with a few old jokes; witness the many volumes of W. W. Jacobs' stories about Joe and Ginger, all built around three or four basic situations repeated over and over again, like a Punch cartoon.

We Americans prefer variety, and on the whole we have it. Our sources of amusement are varied and apparently inexhaustible. Turn loose many temperaments — the Yankee, the Irish, the German, the Jewish, the Greek, the Italian on one situation and you will get as many jokes as there are nationalities, temperaments and dialects.

I never get over being astonished at the infinite possibilities of dialect humor in our comedians. How long could Der Baron and Sharlie keep it up? Or that gentleman who bellows "My fra-a-and"? Od Nick Parkyakakas, that plausible name?

Might Lend Wynn

I suppose, too, we are more ingenious in our twistings of fundamental humor. English fun is not unlike English cooking, about which a witty lady told us not long ago in the Atlantic Monthly. Food is food. Plain roast beef, boiled potato, boiled cabbage, and suet pudding is enough, without the immoral culinary ornaments of the French.

But, we are told, Ed Wynn never serves a joke, no matter how old, in its original form.

Possibly we might lend Mr. Wynn to the British for 13 weeks, just to show them the knack of cookery. One thousand different ways to serve the mother-in-law joke.

Indeed, one of our most amusing farceurs deliberately builds his programs on a single joke with variations. Jack Benny and his Mary use that technique. Every time the theme-pun is touched off it seems funnier, because the fun is not in the joke but in the circumstances of the joke.

So one can go on indefinitely. The danger in the British system is that one of these days they are going to run out of jokes. They will have to be translating them from "Le Rire." Quel horreur! Or from "The New Yorker." They will say it's spinach and to—We must draw a curtain.

New Deal Spur on Capital Goods

Back Loans

HEAVY INDUSTRY FELT DELAYING RECOVERY

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 26—Government economists, studying more reports of improving business today, sought further ways to stimulate capital goods industries, such as those supplying factory machinery and equipment.

Assistance for these industries—which have displayed greater inertia than many others—is the aim of a tentative proposal drawn in memorandum form for the consideration of administration advisers.

Specifically, it suggests that a government agency be set up to insure private loans for the modernization of plants.

With the government providing insurance against excess risk arising from the depression, it was said, many concerns would be able to embark on a program of modernizing plants which have deteriorated or gone out of date since 1929.

Supporters of the suggestion say its potentialities for re-employment of labor compare with those of the housing drive now under way.

It is similar to the housing program in that, instead of lending its own money, the government would seek to stimulate the flow of credit from private banks into modernization work.

6 Billion Loans

The Roosevelt administration which now has $6,946,069,897 outstanding in New Deal loans to a wide variety of borrowers ranging from banks and businesses to farmers and home-owners, has expressed the hope that private enterprise will take over some of the burden.

The President has said government lending will taper off when private agencies assume the task.

Officials who are hoping for a substantial business pickup noted a report of the Federal Reserve Board, which announced yesterday that industrial production and factory employment increased in October.

This was welcome news even though the increase was attributed to the end of the great textile strike.

Industrial activity increased from 71 per cent of the 1923-25 average in September to 73 per cent in October. Steel activity was 25 per cent of capacity as against 23 in September, but lumber and automobiles declined.

Loot Too Small

So Thugs Toss Victim Into River

Albion, R. I., Nov. 26—Enraged at finding only $6, two hitch-hiking thieves tossed their victim over a 20-foot bridge into the Blackstone river here early today.

The victim, Wilfred J. Daignault, 46, of Clinton street, Woonsocket, told police he had picked up the two thugs in Woonsocket after they asked him for a ride to Providence.

Daignault swam the 25 yards to shore in time to see the pair making a getaway in a car that apparently had followed his to pick up the holdup men after the robbery.

The cargo overshadowed the passenger list when the Cunard liner Lancastria touched here on the way to New York. For in her hold was $1,000,000 worth of gold.

It was consigned to the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. A strong force of private guards stood by while the ship was in port, especially detailed by Captain G. R. Dolphin.

Mrs. Ellen Cunningham of Swinford, County Mayo, Ireland, stepped off the gangplank into the arms of daughters she had not seen for 20 years.

Mrs. Una Coleman, of Fay avenue, Lynn, one of her daughters, went to Ireland to bring her over, and two others, Mrs. Julia Coleman of Lawton avenue, Lynn, and Mrs. Ella Daly of Goodrich street, Lynn, were waiting on the pier.

A fourth daughter, Mrs. Anna Freeto of Marblehead, was at the Lawton avenue home when she got there.

Rev. Joseph P. Burke, originally from Waltham, where he was born, was greeted at the pier by a group of clergymen. Rev. Burke had been away three years, studying canon law, sent from the parish in Lowell, where he had been a curate.

DENIES MEXICAN TALE OF ROW OVER BILL

Stories from Mexico City that Francis D. Ahern, 19-year-old Arlington youth and B. U. student, was shot in a quarrel over a hotel bill were circulated by Mexican police only to "cover up," the youth's uncle, Daniel F. Ahern, declared today.

Ahern accompanied the body of the slain boy back from Mexico. Funeral services will be held in St. Agnes church, Arlington, tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

The uncle declared [illegible] his nephew was [illegible] of the shooting. He said that among things taken from the body was a wrist watch which [illegible] had given young Ahern [illegible] graduation from Arlington High School, Ahern declared.

The new Waldorf bar for men only has taken shape—bigger, better, grander. Yet for most New Yorkers there is a nostalgia for the

In the old stand at 5 o'clock there began a parade through the famous Peacock Alley to the sanctuary of colorful figures—the big Wall Street men, race track plungers, reigning novelists, star reporters, actors, producers and the inevitable sprinkle of those conscienceless sharpers known as "We Boys."

I remember seeing at the Waldorf's sweeping brass rail one summer evening John J. Bowl Banner Hoisters Prompt My Lecture No. 7 On Harvard Indifference — And the Cub Apathy Behind Harvard's Football Failure

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE HARVARDS, WHO LONG AGO dispensed with pre-game pep meetings as childish fancies, unbecoming serious minded men, displayed banners of a strange device during the Yale game.

Austen Lake

That is, I assume that the banners, which read "Nuts" and "Who gives a damn?" and were hoisted after the Yale touchdowns, were Harvard banners and not those of Bulgarians, Turks or uncouth folk who wished to commit acts of muckerism behind a false student front.

I am a little old fashioned about these things, coming from a college generation when the students trooped down to the railroad station and waved their teams off to the wars with nine rahs and a nursery jingle.

And even now the football show sets me to brooding in the swift, inexorable advance of my years, and produces cutbacks of sentiment wherein I see the clean, level jaws and clear eyes of classmates, who by now have grown jowls, paunches and broods of children.

The Harvards long since agreed that the night before the game was no time to indulge in cheers, because, obviously, there was nothing to cheer about. Cheers are for victories won on meritorious effort, and there should be time enough to render these things after they have happened. So they said long ago.

THAT IS ONE OF THE MAIN faults with Harvard football, which is something more than a game after all, and is a well source of loyalty, young enthusiasms, and emotional escape.

I find that the old Harvard generations which laid the floor plan for Harvard indifference, are now enthusiastic old codgers whose chins are bowed with a heft of woe over the failure of their [illegible]ns and come away disgusted with the scoffing of the younger [illegible]d.

And in years to come, maybe, the sign hoisters at the Yale Bowl will grow up to stamp and scream when Harvard fails to field a set of bull-chested huskies with rye-bread muscles and granite chins, and will hose down the athletic administration and coaches as lunkheads and dunces.

WELL, TODAY, WHEN YOU SIT in the cozy luxury of the Harvard Club or the various silk-hat Y. M. C. A.'s where graduates over 35 gather to soothe their sorrow and whiff the past with its mournful reek of dead leaves, you will hear them bellyache gravely on the present-day youth's quest for quick disillusionment and its tendency to sneer down the old ideals that they, the grads, hold as imperishable relics of their own student days.

I can safely say that there was a stage at Harvard when any cooncoat radical who lofted a banner reading "Who gives a damn?" and "Nuts" after an enemy touchdown would have been handed down the slopes, row by row, with little of his original clothing left and as a sort of burned offering to the team on the field, which was skinning its shins and suffering rips and fractures for the sake of a boyhood principle.

I NOTICED SATURDAY, AFTER THE athletes had left the field to gathering dusk, the Yale band trundled out before its student section and played "Bright College Years" in a melancholy cadence while the fathers and sons swung their hands after the slow, traditional manner of the papal blessing.

It seemed then that Yale and not Harvard was celebrating the sweet sorrow of defeat. But the Harvard bandsmen had shouldered their instruments and scrammed to hell out of there, while the Harvard mourners were oozing through the windy tunnels, glad to be shut of the drafts and chilblains, and leaving the scene to the faithful martyrs of the press who were stabbing their portables with frigid fingers under the light of burning matches to make a deathless record of the game.

IN MY DAY I HAVE DERIDED the alumni football luncheons, with their rubberized chicken, tepid broth, wilted salad, vanilla ice cream and coffee. And I have yawned through many a he-man, howdy speech by some local brother-type who had played third string to the scrubs and therefore could speak to the alumni as a Dutch uncle.

But I think I prefer the Indian summer enthusiasm of the up-and-at-'em graybeards to the sneering scoffs of a student youth who has skimmed off its illusions and studies boredom as a virtue.

In post-war years this attitude has been largely a Harvard trait, where many a hairy chested son, of fullback proportions and set up, has yawned down the rugged opportunities of the football field. I even suspect that there is much potential material among the tea-cozy group, who now take their fun in marshmallow and cream custard circles.

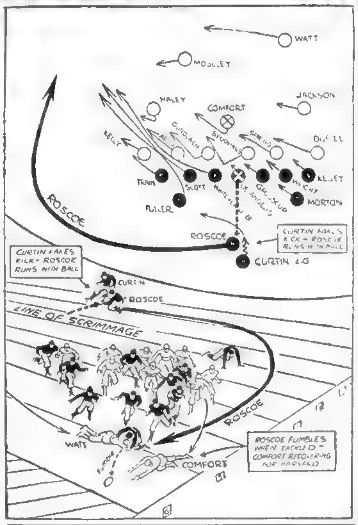
I HAVE ALWAYS FELT THAT the athletic field is the greatest single educational medium in school and college life, where cheating, snivelling and snobbery are filtered through sportsmanship's fine mesh. The principles of the football field are, in miniature, those of later living, which is to swallow disappointment, to get knocked sprawling and rise again, to foster loyalty and eschew unfair advantage.

A lad who masters the principles that lie behind the game, is unlikely to peddle bum bonds and employ double dealing and deceit in his business life. But indifference, which amounts to studied apathy, hints at a weakening breed.

Whither am I drifting? By this time I seem to have put a headlock on myself. So I will close by hoping this will be a lesson to those Harvard banner raisers, unless they were really not Harvard men, but Bulgarians, Turks and uncouth folk who wished to commit acts of muckerism behind a false student front.

Beginning of the End for Crimson Eleven in Bowl Battle With Yale's Men of Iron

With two minutes left in the first period, Yale had the ball on the Harvard 18-yard line, fourth down. Captain Clare Curtin went back from his guard position for a place kick. Roscoe kneeling down to hold the ball. As the ball was snapped, Roscoe raised his knee, before taking the pass—thus being free from the rule which would have made the ball dead at the spot, unless kicked. Curtin took a full leg swing past the ball, missing it intentionally and causing the Harvard linemen to filter through and into the kicking alley to block what seemed a certain kick. Roscoe jumped up and ran around left end, the entire Yale team forming interference. At the Harvard four-yard line, Watts of Harvard tackled him. Roscoe fumbled on the two-yard line, and Comfort of Harvard recovered. Then, for taking excess time above the 30 seconds allowed for a play, Harvard drew a half-the-distance penalty, which does not seem much, but which gave Haley, the kicker, less margin in his end zone. The pass from center came so high that Haley had to jump for it, and make a hasty punt, which traveled only 20 yards beyond scrimmage to Harvard's 22. It was from there, on the second play after, that Roscoe threw his underhand, shovel pass to Morton, who skirted his left end and scored.



Columbias Win Over Syracuse Features Week-End Slate

OUTSTANDING JOBS

Yale's aerial victory over Harvard, 14-0; Princeton's swamping of Dartmouth, 38-13; Stanford's squeeze by the California Bears, 9-7; Columbia's unexpected victory over Syracuse, 12-0; Tufts' successful conclusion of its undefeated season, a 6-0 win over Mass. State; Notre Dame's 12-6 triumph over Army; Illinois' 6-0 defeat of Chicago; Colgate's 11-0 victory over Rutgers, Lehigh's breaking of the five-year Lafayette jinx, 13-7; Indian's surprise 17-6 win over Purdue; Michigan's seventh setback of the year, Northwestern winning, 13-6; undefeated Temple's 22-0 blow to Villanova.

MOST SIGNIFICANT GAME

The 40th gridiron meeting of Stanford and the California Bears before 70,000. Stanford, disabled by the loss of its greatest star, Bobby Grayson, a fullback of All-America calibre, who was obliged to leave the game in the first quarter with two broken ribs, swept to clear cut Rose Bowl recognition and the coast conference championship. Other than a tie with Santa Clara, Stanford boasts a perfect record. Schott's third period field goal provided the winning margin.

MOST THRILLING PLAYS

1—Jerry Roscoe's behind the line shovel pass to Stratford Morton in the opening period and his second period forward into the end zone to Larry Kelley which accounted for a pair of touchdowns and Yale's victory over Harvard.

2—Bill Shakespeare's heave to Dominic Vairo, Notre Dame captain, which ate up 52 yards to a first period touchdown; and Andy Pilney's short pass to Dan Hanley, who scampered 20 yards to dissolve a 6-6 deadlock and give the Fighting Irish victory over Army in their 21st meeting in 22 years.

GENERAL COMMENT

The selection committee of the Rose Bowl game meets today. Stanford is certain to be named Western team. Alabama, with its undefeated record; Colgate, with a 10-7 defeat by Ohio State its only black mark on a truly great season; undefeated Temple, which was tied once, and Pittsburgh, which lost only to the powerful Minnesota Gophers, are hopeful of being named Eastern representative.

Minnesota, which won its first undisputed Big Ten title in 23 years, undoubtedly would have been named for the Rose Bowl but for the conference ruling prohibiting post season games. Lew Manly's Tufts Jumbos wound up their season in a burst of glory, undefeated and untied over a stretch of eight hard games. It was Tufts first undefeated season since 1927.—WALTER KILEY.

YALE TEAM COURAGEOUS

There have been far greater Yale teams beyond any question, teams comprised of players of greater natural ability, greater latent power, and greater finish, but I sincerely doubt if there was ever a Yale team that gave more of what it had than this year's team.

It has carved a niche in the hearts of all Yale adherents and of sport lovers in general.

Harvard's final effort in a dis[illegible] season was an admixture [illegible] hope and infinite despair.

That Harvard at last rose mentally to the proper pitch and commenced to play the desparate game its adherents had looked for,—that it possessed an offense which, if properly applied, could gain ground consistently—was heartening.

But every hard earned scoring opportunity culminated in a disastrous fumble, a poor pass from center or a missed assignment.

The Crimson's first opening came early in the second period directly after Yale's first score.

Receiving the kickoff, Haley, very properly took advantage of the strong favoring wind, a factor Yale wasted in the first period, and punted.

Roscoe fumbled and Danny Comfort, who has a flair for being in the right spot at the right time when fumbles occur, recovered on the 27 yard line.

The big opening had arrived. Here was a "break". But on second rush Harvard fumbled.

Yale recovered and immediately proceeded to carry the pigskin deep into Crimson territory, finally punting into the end zone for a touchback.

WHY DIDN'T YOU KICK

Still with a strong wind at its back literally begging for a punt, the Crimson from deep in its own back yard elected to rush.

It ground out one first down, lost four yards on a sweep and then inside its own 30 yd. line with the game still young, with a strong wind at its back and with the knowledge that Roscoe had fumbled the punt previous, Harvard threw a forward pass. Yale intercepted. A blue touchdown followed shortly.

Still 14 points was [illegible] an insurmountable lead. After the intermission the Crimson players finally started to play [illegible] football. They soon had the ball on Yale's two-yard line, fourth down, one yard to go for a first down and only two yards for a touchdown.

Something went wrong.

Lateral support was lacking and the inevitable Mr. Kelley [illegible] in and nailed the runner in his tracks.

Still Harvard fought.

At the start of the fourth period Locke ran back a punt to his 15-yard line. Again Harvard put together a sustained march grinding out four consecutive first downs.

One rush and but five yards remained. Another rush and but one small yard stretched between the ball and the last white line.

The teams lined up. There at the critical moment Harvard repeated a play sadly in evidence on two previous similar occasions this season—a pass from center to nobody.

Yale recovered on its own seven-

CASEY HANDS RESIGNATION TO BOSS

Eddie Casey's resignation, as head coach of Harvard football, was in Bill Bingham's hands today, but it was doubtful if the director of athletics would take any immediate action on it.

Casey is through as head coach. That is definite, as was predicted exclusively in the Evening American several weeks back. But Eddie probably will be retained in a minor capacity.

Bingham will bide his time in naming the new Harvard head coach. Adam Walsh seems to have the inside track but alumni pressure may force Bingham to get an established head liner like Andy Kerr or Lou Little.

Harvard's gate receipts have diminished greatly in the past few years, and larger gatherings must be attracted to the stadium if the university is to continue its elaborate minor sport program.

Mephisto vs. Celli at Rickard Show

Jim MacDonald, matchmaker at the new Rickard Recreation Center, has arranged two mat bouts for his opening show at Boston's newest sports club next Saturday night.

Mephisto of Germany will clash with Tony Celli of Italy in the feature light heavyweight contest, two out of three falls, and in the semifinal, Jose Firpo will tackle Ted Germaine.

The Professor -:- Doffs Chapeau -:- to Beau Brummel

By Max Kase

The professor, a most garrulous person, yields for the moment in appreciation of the diagnostic qualities of Walter Kiley, the sports department Beau Brummel, who won first honors in last week's American football consensus.

Mister Kiley makes no pretense of science, uses no fangled mtehods of making deductions. To him a line means merely seven men of good or bad quality. A ball toter is either good or isn't.

With such solid reasoning, it was no surprise therefore for Mister Kiley to name correctly nine winners of the 10 major games under surveillance.

His only miss was in the surprising upset of Vic Hanson's Syracuse team by the well drilled team of Columbia and advices from New York report Lou Little being most agreeably surprised by the result.

The professor, using alphabet soup as his means of analysis, ladled the wrong letter in four of his selections, giving him only eight correct in his dozen bits of scientific choosing.

He flunked on the Columbia game, on the Bucknell victory, on the Muhlenberg-Dickinson outcome and on the outcome of the Tufts game.

The professor's failure in the Tufts direction is bringing him well deserved snickers and jeers from the Medford delegation for his failure to recognize greatness in his own midst.

But the savant has been blind to things of real merit in his own backyard before.

One more week of football remains, and the professor will seek to atone for his ailings with his selections to appear the usual Wednesday. Read them and cheer or jeer.

AMERICAN ALL-STAR GRID SELECTIONS BEGIN TOMORROW

Now is the time for all good experts to rally around the banner of All-Star football selections.

The season is fast drawing to a close; the qualities of football greatness and power and strength have been written into the records over a series of Saturdays of gruelling and thrilling grid competition.

So that with [illegible] championships already decided in most cases and [illegible] others the final phase of the season and in most cases the most interesting—is to begin with the naming of All-Star teams.

The Boston American staff of football experts will this week begin to publish their teams of outstanding grid greats. Tomorrow will be published the Greater Boston team of all-stars, of colleges within this area. On Wednesday, the New England team of all-stars will be made public.

Staff writers of the American, aided by correspondents and coaches, will have personally seen the players selected in action so that a real gauge of their ability will have been obtained first hand.

On Saturday, the annual Hearst All-America, culled from the selections of Hearst sports writers in key cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific coasts, together with information and assistance supplied by coaches and football correspondents, will be printed. This will be as official and as authoritative an All-America as the waning season will give crop to.

Next week will come the Greater Boston All-Scholastic team of stars with the Boston American board of schoolboy football coaches making the selection. This staff is composed of Skip Sherlock, Bill Broderick, Jim Mansfield, Fred Ostergren, Charley Dickerman and Bill Ossenberger.

The high knowledge of football values of these mentors of the game and their knowledge of the players in this section, practically all of whom they have seen in action, makes this Scholastic team the real official All-Star team of schoolboy players.

Also next week H. R. (Tack) Hardwick, one of the greatest players produced by Harvard and football editor of the American, will name his team of all-stars of players he has seen in action.

Tomorrow is the day the first of the teams is announced. Watch for the Greater Boston college team.

Being specific, here is what happened in six cases:

1—In the second period Danowski threw a pass to Burnett. The latter caught the ball with one foot out of bounds right in front of the Redskins bench. Burnett's cleat marks showed that he was out of the field of play, but neither the referee nor the field judge would even go near the scene to look.

George Marshall, president of the Redskins, and Lone Star Dietz, protested bitterly. The players did also, but all it got them was an added five-yard penalty. Motion pictures, taken of the scene, clearly show Burnett out of bounds.

2—The line [illegible] Frank Bau[illegible] all afternoon [illegible] before passing.

Strong Finds Redskin Line of Gibraltar Strength in Try for Touchdown

Ken Strong of the New York Giants, only two yards from the Boston Redskins' goal, hits the center of the line in a desperate attempt to score in their game in New York yesterday. The Boston line held and they took the ball on downs. A field goal by Strong was the margin of victory, giving the Giants a 3 to 0 edge over their Boston rivals. H-Y PRICES SURE TO BE CUT; MORENZ HERE TOMORROW

By Bill Grimes

Harvard wound up its most dis[illegible] season with the best ar[illegible] displayed a[illegible] [illegible] Yale eleven.

Harvard had Yale well scouted and had apparently ordered its quarterbacks to peg at the center of the Eli line. The game was in many respects a replica of the Green-Blue tilt. Like Dartmouth, the Crimson was badly outplayed in the first half but came back and took charge in the third and fourth quarters. The crowd was a disappointment. In all probability the price of tickets will be more reasonable in the future. It was the first time I ever saw Harvard-Yale tickets being sold at the field . . .

Apparently the defeat by Yale the week end before did not set well with Princeton, and the Tigers took it out on Dartmouth. And they might have taken plenty to run up 38 points . . . Glad to see that Henry Whittaker, sophomore, received his "D" in the Princeton game . . . Freddie Corcoran put aside his golf cares and watched the Harvard-Yale game from the press box.

There is something wrong when students register their malcontent against a graduate manager by letting the air out of his tires and filling his gas tank with sand . . . Now "Pop" Warner is one step nearer talking about post season games. Temple was too much for Harry Stuhldreher's Main Liners of Villa Nova . . .

[illegible] former [illegible] football and baseball star [illegible] Can it be [illegible] Yale [illegible] of [illegible] at Jack Sr[illegible], alma mater across the river?

[illegible] Harvard [illegible] by [illegible] Yale [illegible] Mal[illegible] is only [illegible] six feet and weighs 193 . . .

One of the first amateurs to apply for a M. G. A. handicap card was Willie Turnesa, Holy Cross freshman, who is playing from Wachusett. Willie is a one handicap player in the Metropolitan district and probably will play from two in this state . . . Penn State is negotiating with University of Miami for a post season game New Year's Day at Coral Gables . . . Tommy Hughitt, who never takes any advice or assistance from any of his brother officials, was left out in a limb during the Redskins-Giant game. As a result he was in hot water all day . . . One week from today the Greenskeepers Club of New England will hold its monthly meeting at the Hotel Statler.

For the second time this season the Bruins broke even on a road trip defeating St. Louis and losing to the Chicago Blackhawks. The [illegible] in Windy City this morning on the same [illegible] with the Hawks and are not due home [illegible] tomorrow afternoon.

The Boston College squad will pack up and leave for the Sandy Burr Country Club on Wednesday. The Eagles are undergoing a strenuous drill preparing for Saturday's Holy Cross encounter.

Dede Klein and Eddie Burke combined for two of the three American goals against Rangers last night. The other was made by Art Chapman, giving the victory a strong Bruin tinge.

[illegible] nations to Lew Manley [illegible] went through [illegible] an undefeated [illegible] record. Howie Morenz will make his first appearance here [illegible] a Chicago uniform tomorrow night at the Garden. Andy Kerr's All-Eastern team is a work of art. He omitted Jerry Roscoe, Yale, and gave Captain Jack Hill, Dartmouth, who has not played 10 minutes all season honorable mention.

Green Bay Packers in general and Clarke Hinkle in particular ruined the Detroit Lions yesterday. Hinkle gave the Packers a 3-0 victory with a place kick from the 47-yard line. There's little need of speeding up any of the Cubs-Reds games, but a wider middle zone would be beneficial to any of the other "Hitch-Men" opponents.

School Tourney Ruined by Crowd

The second annual interscholastic passing, dropkicking, punting and place kicking tournament scheduled for yesterday at Arlington Heights was called off after a few trial heats when several thousand spectators crowded around the players so closely that competition was impossible.

Bart Madden of Arlington, Sam Gentile of Everett, defending champion Sol Nechtem of Chelsea and Ray Forky of Worcester North were impressive in the early events.

Osaka, Japan, Nov. 26—Seventy thousand baseball fans watched the Bing Millers hand the Babe Ruths a 5 to 1 setback in a featureless exhibition game here. The nines were composed of both Japanese and American stars.

Vernon "Lefty" Gomez pitched for the Millers, while Walter Brown, recovered from his Tokio injuries, hurled for the Ruths.

The 12 games to date on the barn-storming tour of the American All-Stars has drawn an estimated attendance of 520,000.

Injuries Slow Tech Boxers

Crippled by a series of injuries and the failure of many of the team's aspirants to drill regularly, the outlook for the M. I. T. ring squad is slightly less promising than when the practice drills started.

First Ned Collins dropped out, due to pressure on his duties. Close upon this blow came a heavy cold which forced Co-Captain Ed Gaughan to drop out of the workouts. Then came the broken thumb of Bill Wold, last year's freshman 135-pound star.

Rawson will be hard pressed to fill up the gaps in the squad.

Nick Lefteres in the 145-pound class, "Champ" Norton in the flyweight division and the other Co-Captain Ed Gaughan, a 155-pound fighter who is back in training, are the only men whom Coach Tommy can rely upon for stiff battles.

Bowser pulled a master stroke of matchmaking when he signed Jim Browning and Joe Malcewicz to clash in the semifinal. This would ordinarily be a feature contest.

In view of the fact the New England Sled Dog Club is sharing in the profits of the show, Bowser was anxious to offer an attraction that would jam the Garden.

Yale Elects 1935 Captain Tonight

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 26 (AP)—With the "Big Three" championship safely stowed away, Yale's football team today turned its attention to selecting its gridiron captain for the 1935 season.

The squad is to be feted at the annual football banquet tonight after which a vote will be taken for the leader of next year's eleven.

yard line. That sealed Harvard's doom beyond recall.

HARVARD KEEPS TRYING

Still the Harvard team kept driving. All credit to it.

Back again it forced its way into Yale territory. It passed the 45-yard mark, the 40-yard mark, the 35-yard mark.

The line was charging as it should, the backs were running with telling speed. It passed the 30-yard mark and then it fumbled. Yale recovered. A few consecutive rushes, and the game was history.

The best effort by far of Harvard for the entire season—the most inspired display of rugged determination of the year, was wasted.

A game that could have been won was fumbled and mispassed into defeat. Those Harvard players have had a taste of what they can accomplish if they give their all. That taste should prove of inestimable value next year.

Yale, on the other hand, made the most of its two best openings and two touchdowns were the result of two superbly executed passes.

The first touchdown came from a "behind the line shovel pass" Roscoe to Morton, in which a smart reversal of the field and some decisive down-the-field interference were magnificently combined.

The second was a long Roscoe to Kelley pass, completed in the end zone. Roscoe threw it beautifully, and Kelley, on the dead run, stretched his tall body and his long arms and, without slowing a particle, pulled the ball out of the skies.

The passing combination of Roscoe to Kelley can in full justice take its place among the great passing combinations of football. They have been brilliantly consistent and consistently brilliant all season.

ROSCOE, KELLEY GREAT

As for individuals, Roscoe and Kelley (their names are somehow inseparable) were immense for Yale. Whitehead, though less conspicuous, played a truly inspiring game—he was an important asset in victory. DeAngelis was here, there and everywhere tackling and interfering.

For Harvard, Haley as usual was a bulwark on defense, making far more than his share of tackles.

Adzigian and Ecker were outstanding. Ford showed promise. Hedblom exhibited the hardest running a Harvard back has shown this season.

As for Spring at tackle, where has he been hiding this season? He looked most promising.

In conclusion I again congratulate Captain Curtin and his team. In their final games they gave all they had, and it proved amply sufficient. They have every reason to be proud.

Haverhill Comes Back to Top Malden After Mid-Season Slump

By Bill Connell

Snatching a very creditable season from the ashes of defeat was the large task accomplished by Haverhill as it edged Malden by a touchdown in a Saturday thriller, at the Haverhill Stadium.

Haverhill started the season with a rush, beating Manning, Methuen and powerful Rindge Tech. Then it was edged in three games by Lynn Classical, Waltham and Beverly. It came back to d[illegible] Quincy and Cambridge Latin, be[illegible] to Lawrence by a narrow margin.

Surely an up and down march and as a result the success or failure of the campaign hinged on the Malden game, and the Thanksgiving fray at Manchester, N. H. Central.

Malden out of the way, Haverhill is planning to tip over Central and wind up the year in successful style.

Jim Mansfield, keen football student and teacher, started his tenth season at Haverhill this autumn. He had little veteran foundation but in a short time had the team in stride.

In the Lawrence game Haverhill was rolling and took considerable credit for the showing even though it did trail. Against Malden the eleven made up for the Lawrence affair.

CARIFIOS TO FORE

The backfield played without a substitution, and only a few linemen went in during the Malden fray. Quarterback Julius Akstin, 155, piloted; left halfback Leo Thomas, 165; right half Dominic Tuccolo, 150, and fullback Luigi "Geno" Carifio, 165, in that contest.

The backfield appeared the best combination of the year, even though it was minus Emil Cerat, now ineligible, who starred during the first half of the season.

Carifio is the second member of his family to star at the school. The eldest brother didn't play football, but then Nick came along to win All-Scholastic rating. Nick captained Worcester Academy this year.

Harry Carifio, a sophomore center, has the earmarks of a natural football player. And there are three younger brothers in grammar school. The Carifio football star still is in the ascendant.

Of the above Haverhill backfield Thomas is back next year. In fact he has two more years to play.

The line has Gene Goodreau, 140 pounds light, at left end; Mal Chandler, 185, left tackle; Pete Davoli, 165, left guard; Joseph "Bobo" Benedetti, 185, center; Dan Conway, 149, right guard; Quentin "Hippo" Migliori, 174, right tackle; Frank Dufault, 150, right end.

On the first team, Chandler, Benedetti and Carifio make the honor role and are as fine players as students.

BARRY BREAKS FINGER

A few of the able subs are Steve Jojokian, Stan Gideika and Phil Wiseblood, ends; Ed Phillips and Ernest Poor, tckles; George Vasiliades and Ray Lynch, guards; Harry Carifio and Stan Herrick, centers; Walter Stryskowski, quarterback; Don Mitchell, Charley Dronsfield and Richard Barry, halfbacks.

Barry, by the way, now has a broken finger and is through for the year.

On the above group enough return in 1935 to give Coach Mansfield and his aide of many seasons, Charley White, a good nucleus.

The freshman team won all its games excepting a scoreless tie with a Malden junior high team, so there must be some yearling material.

By and large, prospects are bright for next fall, as the Haverhill eleven makes a game and effective closing spurt to pin the tag of success on the grind of 1934.

Eagles to Fly High on 'Night Before'

While the team and coaches are preparing a warm reception for Holy Cross when they meet on Alumni field next Saturday, the Boston College student body is preparing a pre-game parade and rally for Friday.

The parade will start at Cleveland Circle where a bonfire and snake dance will be held, the feature of which will be the cremation of a mounted Crusader in effigy.

The torch light automobile procession will then head in town where a parade on foot will march through the city streets with a band and proceed to The Boston City Club, where the Annual B. C.-H. C. smoker is to be held.

COLGATE TEAM IN PROVIDENCE TOMORROW

Providence, Nov. 26—Coach Andy Kerr, chief magician of the Colgate Red Raiders, will lead his hocus-pocus eleven into the Brown stadium Thursday morning for its annual tilt with Tuss McLaughry's oft-defeated Brown Bears.

Kerr confounded the experts today when he suddenly decided to establish residence in Providence tomorrow until game time. This will give the Red Raiders two days' practice on the Brown field.

Kerr decided on this move when the Raiders returned to a snow-covered field after their game Saturday with Rutgers.

Colgate, a leading prospect for the Rose Bowl invitation, has been already established as a 7 to 1 favorite to defeat the hapless Bruins.

Kerr and his famed magicians, who have been defeated once this season, will be playing their final scheduled game of the season. The Bruins have yet to win a major conflict.

Colgate came out of the Rutgers game with all the Raiders in rid condition. Brown, on the other hand, is beset with injuries.

Taft, Ball, Olson, Burt, Capasso and Emery are all nursing bruises or other injuries received in the Holy Cross contest a week ago.

LORD JIM PUT ON AUCTION BLOCK

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—Lord Jim, winner of the Hambletonian, returns to the point from which his racing career started this week when he goes under the auctioneer's banner at the 40th annual Old Glory sale at Squadron "A" Armory. As a yearling consigned to the Old Glory sale by the Walnut Hall Farm of Donerail, Ky., Lord Jim was sold to E. L. Mefford of Columbus, O., for $575. That would hardly buy a look at him this week when he comes back as the first Hambletonian winner ever to be sold at the Old Glory auction.

The three-day sale, starting tomorrow, is expected to bring out about 300 yearlings from the leading breeding farms for trotters and pacers and a number of proven racers in addition to Lord Jim. Among them are the speedy three-year-old filly, Emily Stokes, owned by C. W. Phellis of New York; Raider, a top notch pacer, and Reynolda, owned by Henry H. Knight of Chicago, Ben White's Madelon and E. Holland Harriman's Calumet Eleanor. A number of foreign buyers are on hand to take some of the best offerings back to Europe.

Mr. Boston Says:—

Harvard-Yale Pictures Newspaper Enterprise Bill Jones' Day

By JACK CONWAY

BILL JONES stepped [illegible]

Mr. Boston

"I want to take a ride with me, Jack," asked the nonchalant Mister. Jones. "I'm hopping down to the Yale Bowl to get a few shots of the football game."

Fifteen minutes later Toner and Kenney were stepping into a four passenger closed plane at the East Boston Airport.

Joshua Crane took charge of the controls.

"Let it go," said Jones. "George Woodruff and Freddy Dresser told me to have the pilot bank in the office by 3:30 at the latest."

Over Yale Bowl

FIFTY MINUTES later the plane was over the Yale Bowl. It had covered the 126 mile trip in 50 minutes.

Pilot Crane took his party on a sightseeing trip as the crowd poured into the Bowl.

"This reminds me of the days when I used to ride around Central Park in an open carriage on hot nights," said Jones.

It was 2 p. m. and the players lined up for the kickoff.

"You can now drop me down to within 300 feet of the playing field," Jones shouted to Crane.

"Don't take off the safety straps," yelled the pilot, "or you may go out through the window."

"The h— with the safety straps," replied Jones. "I have to move around to get the pictures."

Jones placed his camera on the edge of a window of the plane He had to be careful that it did not fall out of the window into the wind which blew in from the south.

Down below on the playing field Bill Jones was [illegible] camera in hand, [illegible] Yale goal posts in Motion at Keiley. But was about to [illegible] Jones [illegible] the shoulder of Joshua Crane.

The plane dropped out of the camera fiend [illegible] plane in the center of the cheering crowd [illegible]

Five minutes passed.

"You can head the ship back to Boston," said Jones. "I've got the pictures."

Record Run to Office

FIFTY-FIVE minutes later the plane glided to a perfect landing at the East Boston airport. A taxi hurried Bill Jones and Jack Kenney to the office.

At the [illegible] the [illegible] opened [illegible] and [illegible] put holding to the head [illegible] Jay Smith and his staff rushed the finished pictures through the art and engraving departments.

Downstairs in the composing room the story of Yale's victory was being set in type. Two cuts of the game was being sent from New Haven by direct wires by the brilliant Austen Lake and the capable R. Grimes.

A special picture page was waiting for the shot from the air of the crowd in the Yale Bowl as the game first started.

"Two minutes to play," said Charley Mooney, chief of the Western Union telegraph operators.

"That probably means three or four minutes before the game ends," said Charley Duffy, who used to referee football games before he became a newspaper editor.

"One minute to play," chirped Mooney.

Two engravers hurried into the composing room with the eight column cut of the Battle of the Bowl. They quickly placed the cut in the page.

"Yale Winner, 14 to 0!" read the Page One headline.

"Game over," shouted Mooney.

And many were the picture page and page one, to the stereotype department. A few minutes later the Boston Evening American was speeding on [illegible] with the complete story of the Harvard-Yale game and the only picture of the contest published in an afternoon newspaper on the day the game was played.

The editors of the Boston Sunday Advertiser published a complete pictorial review of Harvard-Yale game. Their pictures were taken by staff photographer Mc-Leish and Sterling Jones, top of the press box. The first pictures were started back to Boston at the end of the first [illegible] of More newspaper enterprise.

BACK IN the photographer's department Bill Jones told of his swell ride to the Bowl game.

"Anything I can do to make you happier?" asked the Sporting Editor.

"I'd like to get a couple of tickets for tonight's basketball match so I can take the missus with me," said Bill.

"Sure," replied the Sporting Editor, "but don't forget to rush your pictures of the game back to the office early."

"Say," chirped Jones, "doesn't a fellow ever get a night off? Oh, anyway the missus will enjoy the game. She doesn't have to shoot any pictures."

BELLATOR, JESS DOUBLE SWEEP

[illegible]

BELLATOR, working mate for the good stake horse Thursday, has only to run to his excellent morning trials in order to be the [illegible] over New York races may be tossed into discard. JESS is on the also eligible list but looms as the probable favorite. If started DOUBLE SWEEP was a good third in back of Steward and Beadin Home earlier in the meeting.

CORRYMEIA, ANCOF ENTRY, FRED ALMY

SECOND RACE—600, claiming, three-year-olds and up, [illegible] furlongs. [illegible]

CORRYMEIA shaped up as pounds the best in this number, but she has drawn number one post position. Thoroughbreds breaking from that post haven't fared so well this season. The ANCOF ENTRY of Rome Good and Lady Seeing, [illegible] post best. Either is capable of earning the place. FRED ALMY, a good hitting tool, is favored by an outside post position and the stable may elect to crack down.

SCOTCH QUEEN, ALWINTOUR, CHURCH CALL

THIRD RACE—$800, two-year-olds, [illegible] furlongs. [illegible]

ST. STEPHENS CAN'T REMEMBER, WEST MAIN

FOURTH RACE—$800, one mile, three-year-olds and up, [illegible]

ST. STEPHENS and [illegible] are among the [illegible] in the [illegible] ing brackets. Last out he turned in a creditable performance against the best that could be mustered in the event. CAN'T REMEMBER, a bullet from the barrier, is in [illegible] under 108 pounds and figures [illegible] after the contention. WEST MAIN, dubbed cacapet ones with [illegible] the other day.

LIVE ONE, LITTLE LAD, FAIRLY WILD

FIFTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, [illegible]

LIVE ONES little [illegible] was [illegible] post to be true. Prior to that he was barely passed out by Garden Message. LITTLE LAD would be all dangerous if he would run back to his New England form. FAIRLY WILD, a consistent trick appeals next best.

ALADDINS DREAM, JAMISON, FLAGSTONE

SIXTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, [illegible]

ALADDINS DREAM is meeting little more than he doubled in his only start over this course. JAMISON a platter with a bit of class will be dangerous in the event he likes the track. FLAGSTONE is due to improve.

PRUMPER, PRETTY WISE, OUT BOUND

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, [illegible]

PRUMPER is dropping down a long way. A repetition of the last victory at Pimlico would make him a cinch. PRETTY WISE is the clocker's tip. OUT BOUND doubled cheaper ones with ease.

St. Columbkilles in Holiday Clash

Thanksgiving morning, St. Columbkilles, newly-formed football team of Brighton will play Sacred Heart of Newton at Faneuil Park, Brighton. Although it is the former's first year on the gridiron, they have developed a team equal to any of the local schoolboy outfits. It will be the first major battle for the new team and should be well worth watching.

BROWN WRONG IN SUSPENDING JUDGES

By Damon Runyon

[illegible]

The suspended officials explained that they had arrived at their conclusion by their interpretation of a muddled system of scoring introduced by the commission, and [illegible]

While [illegible] Barnes and Ridge the commission announces that hereafter one mistake in making a decision will be sufficient to cause the disqualification of the referee, though it does not explain who is to determine when a mistake has been committed.

Presumably it will be when the officials decide contrary to the [illegible] opinions of the boxing commissioners or the "experts," who call them wrong about as often as they call them right out of the box.

The very best ruling the commission could have made would have been to suspend itself for the addlepated scoring system it inflicted upon the fight fans, and which, in this was a mistake, by rescinding it

GAMBLING POOH POOHED

The writer has no brief for the boxing officials, but he thinks the suspension of Ridge and Barnes is an injustice, following as it does upon the high assertion of Commissioner R. [illegible] gamblers had been doing business with some of the boxing officials, and mentioning specifically the Jackson-Fuller bout.

That is an injustice unless Brown has proof of his assertion. And if he has proof, he should present it in definite form, and not in generalities.

As a matter of downright fact, the chargers indicate an amazing lack of knowledge on the part of the commissioner of conditions today among the gambling fraternity generally, and bout gamblers in prize fights in particular. He is thinking about the good old days when the bouts were [illegible]

The writer ventures the assertion that not $500 was bet on the Jack Fuller-Tom Ahearn bout, and not $2,500 on the entire card on which they appeared.

Ahearn was a 3 to 1 favorite, and just ordinary horse sense tells you that at that price there could not [illegible] Tom Ahearn money for Fuller, certainly not enough for the gamblers to undertake to tamper with the officials.

Moreover, gamblers who might bet on fights are people all over. Wherever gate receipts are known, they are [illegible] pocketed, not [illegible]. Commissioner Brown apparently does not get around in the [illegible]

BLAKE BEST REFEREE

This column has contended for a return to the one-man system of [illegible] of pinning with the judges, but the idea, which is merely a reversion to the old-time system, is not guaranteed as a [illegible]

There was plenty of squawking about the decisions of the one-man system, but [illegible] so much squawking as there is against the old system.

But even [illegible] we will decide on referee Lou Blake of Dallas, Tex. The writer does not believe that [illegible] Blake will say he never made a mistake, but he is probably [illegible] [illegible]

But [illegible] George Blake or any one of the [illegible] of George Blake makes a mistake the boxing fans know it, [illegible] and the razzing of those [illegible] them to be over-[illegible]

Uhlan, Record Making Pacer, Dead at Age of Thirty

By Ed. Cogswell

Uhlan, 2:08, is dead.

Word comes from California that the famous trotting gelding has passed away at the age of 30 years. He was the property of C. K. G. Billings.

A flood of memories is associated with Uhlan, particularly to the horse loving public of New England, for it was at [illegible] Readville race track that he was developed and campaigned to [illegible] during fame.

When a green [illegible] he was purchased by Dr. Charles Sanders, of Salem, who placed him in charge of Trainer Rob Proctor at Readville. He developed speed very rapidly and was soon earning brackets against the tops in the Grand Circuit.

At the height of his career he was sold by Dr. Sanders to C. K. G. Billings, then the gas magnate of Chicago, for a reported sum of $35,000. Billings, at the time was [illegible] amateur owner and driver of trotters in the country.

Among the world record achievements made by Uhlan was his mile in 2:04 at Lexington, Ky., on Oct. 8, 1912, marking the fastest mile ever made by a gelding. Then at the same track, he received world records of 27 seconds for a quarter, mile on Oct. 6, 1913, and three days later a mile record of 1:34½, with running mate. It was at Cleveland on July 13, 1911, that Uhlan, hitched with a runner, trotted a half-mile in the record time of 57¼ seconds, the last quarter in 28 seconds.

DOLLAR'S 1934 RECORD SEEN AS GOOD

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The bitterness created by the charges and c[illegible] by bankers and politicians [illegible] engaged in debating stabilization has beclouded the issue to a degree that makes it practically impossible for the average man to form dependable ideas of his own. For this reason, we [illegible] in the current issue of the Brookmire Counsel[illegible] holding particular interest. It is the opinion Harold A. Stonier expressed that our new dollar has been doing w[illegible] manent stabilization should be gratified by the de[illegible] ually shown [illegible] ng has shown [illegible] 3 per cent and francs 97 per cent the international dollar, therefore, has been about 92 per cent stable internally, the domestic dollar has been about 95 per cent stable, as measured by cost of living [illegible] ons.

But a counter-revolution that started 25 years ago . . . The real revolution, in the opinion of the educational director of the American Institute of Banking, came 158 years ago . . . When Thomas Jefferson in America and Adam Smith in England led the rebellion against mercantilism . . . Which was government in business . . . They succeeded . . . Then 25 years ago the tide turned and socialistic trends developed . . . which started to put the government back in business . . . Whereas Mr. Stonier says it is likely to stay for some time to come.

Out of the chaos of price raising schemes and offsetting measures designed to control costs there is emerging a more sensible program. This, it is said, aims for a better balance of [illegible] price ra[illegible] may meet w[illegible] sections there are [illegible] apparently are driving full steam ahead on past acts. Marketwise the rails show signs of awakening. Once they do it is our guess they will take over the lead. Especially the good ones. The industrials might keep pace with them but we doubt it. The favorable market [illegible] not lie with groups whose adherents have recently shifted out of holdings else[illegible] lie with the groups deserted. Once the rails start they will rush to make up lost [illegible]. At the same time the industrials as a group face stubborn resistance about 3 to 5 points higher up.

Says Enthusiam Growing in Wall Street Circles

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

[illegible] to fill up as the new week opens. Some real old-fashioned enthusiasm [illegible] each other in being publicly optimistic, the market should have pretty clear sailing for a while.

The present rise seems to be shooting for Thanksgiving on Thursday.

An advance over the next three days will create a decidedly mellow feeling for the holiday . . . The street will make more of this than usual as it has been many a month since it has had anything to celebrate . . . The downtown area is losing some of the "deserted village" appearance that was so obvious this summer and early fall . . .

[illegible] something more than apathetic customers' men and empty chairs and [illegible] to make a few pennies.

Dormant market groups are beginning to show stirring of returning life. The four principal ones are the coppers, oils, utilities and [illegible].

Gold shares alone seem to retain the disfavor which followed the administration's shift from inflationary tactics to more orthodox monetary policies . . .

Demand for backward stocks is broadening due to the high selling prices of the favorite industrials. The boys argue logically that if business is going to improve to justify fancy prices for industrials, the others will share.

Utilities Are Feature on Curb

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 26—Activity and strength in the utilities featured a [illegible] day.

Demand [illegible] the T. V. A. plan as unconstitutional. Commonwealth Edison advanced a point to 45; Duke Power rose ⅝ to 39¼; Electric Bond & Share was up ¼ at 8⅛ and American Gas & Electric rose ¼ to 18¼.

Insurance Company of North America featured the specialties [illegible] at 53[illegible].

Hiram Walker stood out in the alcohols with a gain of ½ point to 29⅛.

Oils and metals were a trifle sluggish, but nevertheless ruled steady. Cities Service common edged up ⅛ to 1⅛.

FORBES SEES GAINS IN AUTO INDUSTRY

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 26—This report comes to you (as the radio announcers would say) from the automotive metropolis of the world.

Detroit is tooling up. In a few weeks it will be humming. It is getting all set for bigger [illegible].

[illegible] planning to send cars rolling off the production line in increased volume.

Some figure on a 50 per cent gain. One important factory is gearing up for 100 per cent improvement over this year.

So Detroit is becoming distinctly optimistic, cheerful.

We have heard a lot about—"all steel bodies." Apparently never heretofore has there been any such animal.

Two different automobile presidents have just confided to me that they are introducing for the very first time real, genuine honest-to-goodness all steel bodies, including the roof. One said:

"Up till now you could push a stick through a car's roof. Our new roof is to be steel. That's something truly new."

Auto manufacturers, like New York and other industrialists, are tremendously encouraged by the recent assurances and actions at Washington. Co-operation, they now believe, is displacing coercion. Although Detroit employers are preponderantly Republican, they are eager to go along with President Roosevelt in his new path.

So the outlook, long dark, is really brightening up.

Since Roy D. Chapin returned to the helm of Hudson Motor after serving as Secretary of Commerce at Washington, things have quickened their pace.

Hudson this year has doubled its 1933 business—a unique record.

There are 50 per cent more Hudson and Terraplane dealers than a year ago.

Production has already started in 1935 models, embodying all-steel roofs. In one week distributors attending the "opening" placed $[illegible] worth of orders.

Says President Chapin:

"Hudson is entering 1935 with a greatly expanded advertising program. A big part of the appropriation will be used early in the year. Employment at the factory is expanding rapidly. October was the best October since 1929. For the first time in the company's history October sales eclipsed September's by nearly 1500 cars."

Hudson and Terraplane have a "mystery," which is described as absolutely different from anything ever invented. But the secret isn't being revealed just yet.

Richard H. Grant, General Motors general sales generalissimo, just back from investigating conditions throughout the drouth area, tells me: "Government money helped out greatly and now crop prospects are so encouraging that everybody is confident of better times and better business next year. St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Kansas City, all share this feeling. Betterment all over this area will have both direct and indirect national benefits."

President Alvin Macauley reveals that Packard will be ready to exhibit its long awaited new lower priced, smaller car at the New York show in early January. "It's not a cheap car," he emphasized.

Macauley, noted for his conservatism, goes this far now:

"I am reasonably hopeful that business is to go ahead. America is not going to keep on in the doldrums. But we must stick as closely as possible to economic laws. Danger is courted by straying far from sound fundamentals.

"In the automobile industry materials, labor, everything else are up, but car prices are down. This makes it difficult to earn a profit."

Bonds Higher in Light Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 26—While no special feature came to the surface in the bond market today, values were well maintained and various corporate issues edged a little above the final levels Saturday. Trading was light.

Some of the U. S. Governments were traded on fair scale, with prices a little higher in some of the Treasuries, Farm Mortgage 3s and Home Owners Loan 4s. Treasury 3⅛s of 1946-56 were moderately active around 106.3 or 1-32 of a point above the previous closing.

There was also a good turnover in the Home Loan 4s from 100.26 to 100.28, the latter quotation being 3-32ds above Saturday's market. Federal Farm 3s sold at 99, up 3-32ds.

On gains ranging from ¼ to ¾ [illegible] point American Power & Co 5s were transferred at 53¾, American Telephone 5s at 110¼, Baltimore & Ohio 4½s at 53, Detroit Edison 4½s at 55⅞, Phillips Petroleum 5½s at 101¾, Postal Telegraph 5s at 42[illegible], Southern Pacific 4½s at 60, Southern Railway 4s at 56, United Drug 5s at 85¾ and Youngstown Sheet & Tube 5s at 87¾.

Expect Rise in Price of Tires

Akron, O., Nov. 26 (AP)—The years when retail tire dealers frantically slashed prices have reached their end, in the opinion of manufacturers here.

From now on says W. O'Neil, president if one of the large tire companies, the dealers may be expected to reverse the process, and happy with the knowledge that what they don't sell now will be sold later and at higher rices.

"A car owner no longer can save money by waiting for the next price change. If he waits, he loses," O'Neil asserts, and other manufacturers have expressed similar opinions.

Grains Higher in Chicago Trading

Chicago, Nov. 26 (AP)—Responsive to Liverpool wheat quotations higher than expected, grain values here scored advances today. Enlarged selling on price upturns, however, led to quick setbacks.

Opening unchanged to 1¼ higher, May 98⅝-99, Chicago wheat afterward went below Saturday's finish. Corn started ¼ off to ⅝ up, May 86½-⅞, and subsequently held near the initial limits.

Cotton Steady in New York Trading

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—Cotton futures were steady. Eight to 10 points on higher Liverpool cables and fewer December notices than expected. December 12.37, January 12.47, March 12.56, May 12.55, July 12.50, October 12.10.

Bank of Italy Rate

The Bank of Italy has raised its discount rate to 4 per cent from 3 per cent.

PROFIT-TAKING PARES GAINS NEAR CLOSE

New York, Nov. 26—Scattered profit taking tended to snag the advance in stocks and gave the list a moderately irregular appearance at the close today.

Realizing tendencies were most apparent in the railroad shares where Atchison, Union Pacific, New York Central, Southern Railway and other earlier favorites lost their earlier gains and in a few instances settled below yesterday's close.

UTILITIES STRONG

United States Steel, Bethlehem and other industrial shares which had been favorites earlier in the day also took on a less buoyant appearance as the session neared the close and gains were pared down substantially.

Utility shares maintained a uniformly strong tone despite the easiness in other sections. Power and light shares were spurred by the Edison Electric Institute's announcement that it would fight the Government's power program.

Profit-taking also became heavier in the motor shares where Chrysler and General Motors retained only a small fraction of their earlier gains.

American Telephone was a volatile feature today getting up above 110 for a gain of nearly 2 points only to fall back to its previous close.

Trading was active during the forenoon session but showed a tendency to decrease on the irregularity. Turnover for the day exceeded a million shares by a substantial margin.

STEEL OUTLOOK

A brighten outlook for steel production aided stocks of this group while tobaccos found new friends in the strength of greatly improved consumption. Some buying in the rails and utilities was based on the theory that these issues had been oversold.

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated current steel operations at 28.1 per cent of capacity, a gain of ½ point.

The utilities were a bit more hopeful following announcement that the Edison Electric interests, representing 80 per cent of the country's power interests, had declared war on the administration's program as set forth in the Tennessee Valley authority and similar projects.

While attorneys for the institute declared the TVA legislation "palpably unconstitutional," it was recognized that the Supreme Court might take an entirely different view of this question and that the matter of "public policy" could enter into a final decision of the case.

Utility and rail stocks, brokerage commentators pointed out, still have considerable distance to travel if they are to catch up with the industrials. It was also recalled that bonds, while recently exhibiting some improvement, have yet to positively confirm the recovery trend. The average for listed loans is now just about where it finished last July.

The thought was stressed in some quarters that, while there is unquestionably a surfeit of idle capital seeking employment, the fact that it should concentrate largely upon industrial equities leaves something to be desired.

Atlantic Coast Line to Pay $1

New York, Nov. 26 (AP)—The Atlantic Coast Line Company of Connecticut, holding company for the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, today declared a dividend of $1, payable December 15 to holders of record December 4. This is the first dividend paid on the issue since March, 1932.

NIGHT LIGHTS and SIGHTS by Manny Sherman

Let's talk turkey, giving thanks that there are so many places in Boston where you and the Mrs. or even the entire family, can go for a gorgeous dinner on the holiday. And when I say holiday, that's what I mean. Why have the wife's whole day spoiled by the hard of cooking, baking and washing dishes. SHE deserves a holiday . . . and how she will enjoy a good dinner and a good show. Whaddye say pal? Give her a break. Where to go? Why that's easy. Look in your favorite evening newspaper.

'Tess of the Storm Country" was one of Mary Pickford's earliest screen successes. But "Tess of the Brown Derby" would storm any country, I mean. Tess Gardell. Don't take my word for it. Go have a look-see yourself. What a line of lovely gals in the floor show . . . what a line! Congrats to producer Charley Elbey. And as for emcee Joe Herbert, what a line goes for him, too.

It's noontime. A flock of good looking business girls and their boy friends are stepping sweet and nice after lunch at Rosebud Gardens on Bedford street with the Alonia Hawaiins plunking romantic music. The scene is repeated at night with Hollis Gray's orchestra. Boys with a gas buss find the Gardens at Wayland a good spot to take the gal pal, where Al Schofield, the rhythm maestro does the dance tunes "Al" la swell.

Hotel Puritan's Old Boston Room may depict early history in the decorations, but the music for dancing is as modern as the date on the calendar, meaning the just famous Ruby Newman's crew. Among the band boys you'll find Harold Wiener, who sure has plenty of sax appeal (right, fellows?) and Sam Izen, who snares the drum and plays singles from pretty dances. Sam is also enlisted for the bridle path, having recently been gifted with a saddle horse.

According to Sam Golden the chefs at Hotel Essex are working with Zest and Gusto to make the Thanksgiving dinner a masterpiece of gastronomical art (there's a word that makes the typewriter smoke). I've never met those guys Zest and Gusto but I'm laying a bet that there will be a feed at the Essex that will burst the buttons right off any man's vest.

To ride way way up to the 15th floor of the Hotel Bradford is an elevating experience. Of course, there's a roof, but that's another story. The real low-down on this high-up place is the Silver-wine sparkle of the floor show at the Cascades. It's a big show, and aces for entertainment, with Joe Rines doubling as band leader and big chief of the entertainers.

The newest idea at Hotel Vendome is the Jade Room, soon to make its bow. Like the new famous Nippon Room, the Wedgewood Room and the Empire Ballroom the designs are by Harold Field Kellogg and the art work by Marie Bauer List.

For sophisticated Boston folks who have seen Paree and dined at the late Coconut Grove and Café De Paris, the new Hotel Lafayette on Commonwealth avenue, to be opened on New Year's Eve will be delightful, for it will be thoroughly French in appointments and cuisine.

Johnny Walsh, big boss of Suntaug Inn, is all smiles these days and well he might be. Business at this popular dining spot is the best in a score of years . . . get that . . . a score of years, which proves two things . . . better times and efficient management.

Saw a party of four the other night at the Hotel Statler, Salle Moderne, and we're they having fun? I happened to tune in on a remark one of the girls made. Here 'tis. "I thought that band in the H . . . in New York was perfect, but this is the grandest band I ever danced to." So there you are Anson Weeks.

The Hotel Touraine is the favorits with a lot of show folks, who are playing Boston. There are 60 there now, and do they think the Club Touraine is smart? Just drop in some night and see them having fun there.

Heigh ho and let's take a peek at the Lido line-up . . . Brown and Jay are on tap for tap dances, Colletis and Barry in society dances and Ruth Kincaide, with a nice voice. Friday nights are "Paramount" nights. Drop in and see why. Glad to hear Eddie Ferry's orchestra has a commercial over WAAB and WHDH.

Stella Hints Walter Could Wed Heiress

SYNOPSIS

Helen Schiller, pretty manicurist in the Forty-fourth Street branch of the swanky Anastasia Beauty Salon, so far forgot discipline one morning as to dance a few steps before the work-day began—and was seen by Walter Riley, owner of the salons.

He did not speak then about this, but returning that evening to the shop, went to her—and found himself disarmed by her smile, and attracted to her. He asked if he might take her to dance, and she assented. That led to other evenings together — evenings spent with him, ever afraid that his sisters, who managed the Anastasia Salons, might see him.

After one evening at the theater, Helen fell asleep as he drove her to her home in Bay Ridge—and he awakened her with a light kiss. She pushed him away, but he would not be denied, and he kissed her again. "You are the first girl I have ever kissed," he told her soberly, realizing that he loved her.

Events in the Riley family followed fast, with Irene, who managed the swanky Fifty-seventh Street salon, becoming engaged to Stella Walter sent a telegram to Helen asking her to meet him that night. She was thrilled by the ending—"I love." The day of Irene's marriage found the Riley home in an uproar with Mrs. Anastasia Riley wearing diamonds against less ascetic look. Squabbles, the wishes of Irene, held the center of the stage.

"I love you, Dirk." Irene looked deeply into his eyes. "I do want to make you so happy."

CHAPTER X.

Irene exploded again when she saw Agnes. This time there was a real scene. Agnes had lately gone girlish and the effect even Anastasia, who usually on general principles opposed Irene, had to admit was pretty awful. In her effort to look young because Carl was so youthful, Agnes, with the Riley thoroughness, had carried measures to extremes. She wore an Empire cut light blue velvet dress and had arranged her hair in curls on top of her head.

She came into the bedroom a little hesitantly and Irene, who was being ministered to by the maid, nearly fainted when she saw her. Stella, who had on her long squirrel wrap and was carefully pulling on her long gray kid gloves, dissolved into weak laughter.

"My Lord, Agnes," she choked, "where in the name of heaven did you get that rig? No wonder you had your room with."

Agnes burst into tears. Irene stormed. Anastasia commanded sharply. "Take off that truck. Irene lend her your black net dress. Hurry up, young lady, we have no time to waste. Comb out my daughter's hair and shake your stumps. Stella run into Agnes' room and find her a slip and black slippers."

They all fell to redressing Agnes who was like putty in the hands of the others.

"Now don't sweat up the armpits of this dress, you fool," Irene snapped.

She had her hat on now and was pawing the ground with impatience. Irene was carried off by old Mrs. Ternune a silvery old lady with a quivering voice and lovely old blue eyes in a face like cracked porcelain.

COMES IN SWIFTLY

"My dear," she said to Irene as she took her hand, "it is so lovely and dear of you to come here to us for the ceremony. We appreciate it so much. I hope you'll be happy. Oh! I know you and Dirk will be so happy. He's in the next room with father waiting for you. Dirk, come in, dear, I have brought you your bride."

"I never knew it was possible to be so happy." He laughed joyously. Irene put her cheek against his. She was nearly as tall as he. She looked at his fine sensitive face, his full wide mouth, deep blue eyes like his mother's, behind the tortoise-shell glasses he habitually wore. She liked his glasses, they suited him and gave his face a homelier, less ascetic look.

"I love you, Dirk." Irene looked deeply into his eyes. "I do want to make you so happy."

He kissed her. "Darling." He kissed his mother and Irene leaned over and kissed her too.

"Oh, Dirk, thank you for the lovely flowers. It was so sweet of you to send each of us a corsage. Mother was so pleased."

FILLED WITH PEOPLE

The big wood-paneled living room was now comfortably filled with people. As Irene entered her eye involuntarily sought her mother and sisters. They made an attractive group by the window, Anastasia leaning on her son's arm. A wave of love suffused Irene. How handsome they were. She gave them a brilliant smile.

They were proud of Irene, proud of themselves. Among the guests were some of New York's oldest families: The Updykes, the Ditmars, Colonel and Mrs. Ten Eyck, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Chase, the Copley-Blakes. The Rileys looked as good as the best.

Truly the Rileys had come a long way.

The simple ceremony over, there was served, in the dining room adjoining, a wedding breakfast (the Rileys secretly thought it extremely imposing).

The young couple left shortly after to the gay accompaniment of handfuls of rice and good wishes. Th guests slowly dispersed.

In the other car Anastasia and Agnes were indulging in a Riley complimentary orgy.

They agreed that Irene looked beautiful; that Dirk was the nicest member of his family and of all his friends and that the Rileys were actually the cream of the party.

"His sister is certainly some frameup," Agnes supplied contentedly, nestling happily against her husband.

Anastasia snorted: "What she needs is some Anastasia beauty treatments."

"I like Dirk," Walter observed. "There's something so big and fine about him. I like him better than anyone I've ever met."

"Oh, you mustn't like him better than my Carl," Agnes bleated girlishly.

"Stop being kittenish," Anastasia admonished roughly, "I get sick when you do."

Agnes turned white, but said nothing. Walter stepped nastily into the breach. "I'm going to be awfully busy these next few days. I guess we both will, eh, Carl, old boy?"

"We sure will, you bet," Carl responded fervently.

Arriving at the apartment, they all rushed in to change their clothes.

"I'll run you up to your place in my car, Stella," Walter told her. "I left some papers there that I need."

"Oh, that will be fine, Jerry, darling, you're going straight over to Brooklyn, aren't you, dear?"

"Yes, hon."

"Will you meet me for dinner or do you want to come to Brooklyn?"

"Don't bother," he said hastily. "I'll meet you at the Brevoort at 7."

"You won't be late, lover?"

"I'll try not to be. You know sometimes I can't get away to the minute."

"You'll call me if you're delayed, won't you, lover? Promise. You know I get so nervous waiting."

"You must learn not to be nervous," he teased, pinching her cheek.

DRIVE IN SILENCE

"But you'll surely be there, pet?"

"Certainly," he exploded impatiently, "and for lord's sake if I am late, don't get hysterical. I'll be there. I tell you."

"All right, dearest, and please try not to be late."

Jerry made his escape. Stella, redressed, now joined Walter.

"Where to, Wally, Wall."

"Righto."

They drove in silence to Forty-fourth street. "Well, Walter," Stella said finally, "you're the last of the Rileys still unmarried. If Irene could manage a Techure, I guess you'll land one of the Vanderbilt girls."

"Don't kid yourself, Stell. What would a Vanderbilt girl want with me."

"Why, Walter, you're the best looking man outside of the movies. That reminds me, Walt, you'll have to hurry a rake. Be early, manage on what you're paying him. Look what Carl's getting, nearly twice as much. It isn't fair, Walt. I've done as much for the business as Agnes. Why should Carl get two hundred a week and Jerry only a hundred and a quarter?"

"Because Carl does twice as much work," Walter retorted bluntly.

POPEYE TO AID SANTA PARADE

People, who are getting used to the idea announced by Jordan Marsh Company six years ago that Santa Claus had a son, are likely to come away from the annual parade on Thanksgiving Day with a vague idea that "Popeye" and Santason are in some way related, and that perhaps Santa Claus has something to do with the creation of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser comic strip characters.

When Santason sets his plane down at the Charles river basin on the Esplanade, Thanksgiving morning, at 11 o'clock, he will be greeted not only by his illustrious father, Santa, but also by that hero featured daily by the Boston American, "Popeye," the star of Segar's Thimble Theater, who will share honors as the feature in the two-mile line of march.

"Popeye" will appear on a featured float with all his pals of the Thimble Theater. There will be Olice Oyl, in her black jersey dress and large shoes, properly escorted by her brother, Castor, and there will be the King of the Nazilians, who recently regained his throne with the aid of "Popeye." Oscar, the king's office boy, with his funny buck teeth, will be on hand to do the king's bidding, while some of the fighting men of the Nazilians will show the throng how those famous blow guns actually work.

Skippy and other comic characters will be on hand with all their pals.

SEARS TO BRING RADIO SANTA

Santa Claus is coming to the youngsters of Boston by radio this year, thanks to Sears Roebuck & Co. The firm today announced a new series of children's programs that will feature Santa Claus, the Toy King, his helpers, the Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe, Little Jack Horner, the Cat and the Fiddle and other nursery favorites.

The series, hailed as something new in children's broadcasts, will begin at 5:45 p. m. tomorrow over Station WNAC, and will include Helen Young, Gerard Gorham and other young stars.

Edwin H. Kasper, former Broadway and Hollywood star, will be Sears' radio Santa Claus.

BASKET PARTY TOMORROW

The second of the Tuesday night old-time and modern dancing parties in Catholic Union Hall, in aid of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund, will be held tomorrow with a large committee formed to make the party even more entertaining than the previous one.

M. J. Twomey, director of Twomey's dancing academy, and artists who furnish music for the dancing, heads this committee as well as taking charge of the dance.

Ad Club to Hear 'This-Week' Editor

Mrs. Marie Brown Meloney, editor of the new publication, This Week, will speak at the Advertising club luncheon tomorrow noon in the Georgian room at the Hotel Statler.

Mrs. Meloney has worked for newspapers in New York, Denver and Washington. She is also editor of the New York Herald-Tribune Sunday magazine.

Well, Well, It's All Real

THRONGS CHEER SANTA CLAUS

Santa Claus is here! He arrived yesterday afternoon and was greeted at Huntington avenue station by thousands of Boston boys and girls. He plans to stay at Toyland in Houghton & Dutton's until Christmas.

All the way from the station to Beacon and Tremont streets the sidewalks were lined with children anxious to catch a glimpse of the old fellow who will fill their Christmas stockings and load the presents on their Christmas trees.

The Angel Guardian band and a detachment of mounted police led the parade which escorted Santa to his headquarters in Houghton's Toyland.

The royal sleigh had to be mounted on wheels because Jack Frost and the storm kings failed to send snow for the occasion, but Jolly old Santa told his young friends that there was plenty of snow at the North Pole and along most of the route to Boston.

Following Santa came a beautiful white horse from the deserts of far away Arabia, and a host of ponies, monkeys, and other animals to delight the hearts of the children.

A dog train of real Eskimo huskies which hauled old Santa's sleigh is said to be the only performing troupe of its kind in the world. Santa is very proud of the tricks he taught them to do.

ITALY DEFIANT TO YUGOSLAVIA

Copyright, 1934, by Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 26—Italy today openly defied Yugoslavia's attempt to investigate the plot that resulted in the assassination of King Alexander at Marseille last month by refusing France's demand for the extradition of two alleged principals.

The Court of Appeals at Turin ruled against France's request for Dr. Ante Pavelich, alleged terrorist leader, and his supposed assistant, Egon Kvaternik.

Both have been under arrest in Italy since shortly after the murder of Alexander and Louis Barthou, the late Foreign Minister of France.

By International News Service

Vienna, Nov. 26 (INS)—In a little hunting lodge at Wildalpen, high in the forests of upper Styria, the eyes of Europe were turned anxiously today.

Believed to be welding a solid front against Yugoslavia, which accused Hungary of complicity in the murder of King Alexander, were representatives of Austria, Hungary and Italy.

The meeting is being held in the closest secrecy. Around the rough board table in the lodge were Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria, Premier Julius Goembos of Hungary, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, Austrian vice-chancellor, and Ambassador Preliscl, Italian representative in Vienna.

Grant Public Hearing On Racing Commission

Governor's Council Is Duty Bound to Put End to Ugly Rumors

IT is clearly the duty of the Governor's Council to grant, without delay, the request for a public hearing on qualifications of the Racing Commission nominees.

The obligation of the council in this respect is three-fold: first of all to the general public, secondly to the nominees, and finally to the racing interests.

There is a factional, bitter controversy in progress over Governor Ely's selections. There is obviously so much going on under the surface that public confidence in the entire situation has been shaken. Only a complete airing of the entire situation can restore it.

The public trust is of infinitely greater value than all the millions it is proposed to invest in horse and dog racing in Massachusetts. The public trust is, or should be, the first consideration of the council.

RACING and legal gambling will not profitably exist in this state without public confidence and when they fail to pay a profit they will fail altogether to exist.

In the light of current developments, salted with ugly rumor and innuendo, it is obvious that no racing commission, of whatever personnel, will enjoy public confidence until the situation bearing upon qualifications has had a healthy airing.

The council would be duty-bound to grant this public hearing if only in fairness to General Charles H. Cole, William H. Ensign and Charles F. Connors, the nominees it has not confirmed.

They are entitled to know who is opposing them and upon what grounds.

THERE is a widespread report that out-of state interests are bringing considerable pressure to bear in an effort to effect the personnel of the commission. If it is really so, let the charge be made in public. Those interested in racing promotion here are entitled to know. The public demands to know.

This request for a public hearing originated with the original petitioners for a referendum on the pari-mu'uel system in Massachusetts. They certainly deserve the council's every consideration.

Finally, the members of the Governor's Council will do well to consider themselves. They cannot afford to ignore such a general and logical request for, by doing so, they would shake public confidence in themselves.

Fish for Uncle Sam

We Hope They Multiply

The world's most dangerous school of fish will soon be in New England waters.

They are Uncle Sam's new submarines, building with one exception, at Groton, Conn., and Portsmouth, N. H.

Fish, you ask?

Yes, fish! For the Navy Department has decided to name them the Pollack, Perch, Finna, Pompano and Pickerel.

UNITED STATES NAVY SUBMARINE—A FIGHTING FISH OF THE SEA.

Groton is building yet another, the Plunger, named after the first "sub" authorized by Congress, away back in 1893.

And, by the way, these are fish our steam trawlers won't bother!

We hope they multiply rapidly.

Two Strange Monsters

One Is Fed by Taxpayers

Scientists are reported mystified by the remains of a horse-shaped sea monster, cast on the beach at Henry Island, near Prince Rupert, British Columbia.

The find was made in territory where a sea serpent has often been reported.

If this mystifies the scientists, what would they think of that strange political monster—obsolete county government?

It dates back to Colonial days, roves over all New England and the rest of the United States, feeding exclusively on blood-money wrung from the taxpayers.

Let's corral it and put it in the museum of antiques, where it properly belongs.

Treadway Is Right

For the General Sales Levy

Congressman Treadway of Massachusetts, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, comes out for adoption of the general manufacturers' sales tax.

This tax, properly administered, would prove of the "painless" variety. Its adoption would allow the scrapping of many nuisance taxes, etc., now being levied.

Congressman Treadway will find he has plenty of company when he supports this proper form of taxation at the coming session of Congress.

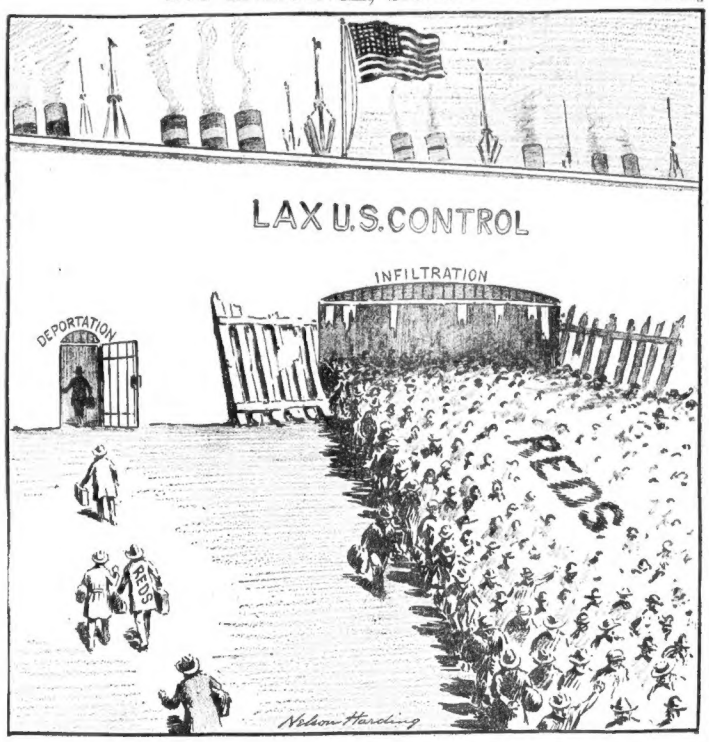
BIG ENTRANCE, SMALL EXIT!

By Nelson Harding



That entrance gate upon the right,
Intended to control the tide,
Fails as a filter to reject
The Red flood from the other side.

The too large gateway constitutes
A fatal weakness in the wall.
The little door upon the left
Marked "DEPORTATION" is too small.

-:- -:- By Elsie Robinson

LOVE ALWAYS PAYS

Love always pays.

Love is always the biggest investment you can make—the greatest adventure you can undertake.

"But," you protest, "that isn't so. There are people you shouldn't love—people you've no right to love. And there are people who are unworthy of love. They'll cheat and betray you . . . impose upon you . . . put off and forget you and leave you broken-hearted. Love like that doesn't pay."

Elsie Robinson

Yes, it does. Love ALWAYS pays.

No one ever loved without being the richer and wiser for that experience. And that is true regardless of the other person's response. FOR THE VALUE OF LOVE DOESN'T LIE IN WHAT IT DOES TO THE OTHER PERSON. OR IN WHAT HE DOES TO YOU . . . BUT IN WHAT LOVE DOES TO YOU, YOURSELF.

LOVE NEVER DECEIVES

That's a simple fact—yet few of us realize it or have the courage to admit it.

Most of us judge love by the loved one's reaction. Are we petted, flattered, showered with gifts—shown adoring consideration? Then we conclude, love is a success. Love pays—if it ends like that.

But suppose it doesn't end like that? Suppose the one we love does not return that love? Or repays it with indifference and unkindliness? Then, we cry, love's a farce—a tragedy. We've been fools to love. We've been tricked.

We're wrong. Love never tricked a human heart. You may trick yourself by expecting things you have no right to expect. You've no right to expect another person to understand you. You have no right to possess another life. Above all, you've no right to make another person responsible for your happiness.

You have no right to expect any of these things—and if you insist upon expecting them you're bound to be hurt.

But if you're willing to love for the sake of loving, knowing that love is its own reward, you'll never be disappointed.

For then, no matter how things turn out, you'll always be the better for the bargain.

CONTROL YOURSELF

Is the loved one cruel, unfaithful? Then that's HIS bad luck. And there's probably little you can do about it, save to protect yourself and your affairs from his weakness and viciousness. But your own love need not be damaged.

You cannot control another's acts, but you can always control your own attitude, and, no matter what the other fellow does or doesn't do, THE CONDITION OF YOUR OWN HEART IS UP TO YOU.

Love's always an INSIDE job. And that is true of all the great experiences in life. Our real life is lived in our own feelings. Love is what we make it. The one you love may be unworthy—but love itself is never unworthy.

The one you love may never know of it. It may not be possible for your lives to mate—or even meet . . . YET, IF YOU LOVE BRAVELY AND BEAUTIFULLY, YOUR HEART WILL BE THE RICHER EVERY HOUR FOR THAT OUTPOURING.

Dare to love! Dare to believe in love! Dare to give everything you have to love! And don't worry about the consequences, due to your own selfishness or stubbornness or stupidity.

But there are never any unpleasant consequences to love, itself. Love ALWAYS has a happy ending. Love always leads on and on to—MORE LOVE.

Happy Home Old Style?

-:- -:- By Winifred Black

Well, for goodness sake, what's happened to all the happy homes?

Winifred Black

We used to hear about them all the time.

We read about them in books, we sang about them in songs and did you ever notice it—they were always little—the happy homes?

Cottages don't you know, and preferably brown—or little old gray farm houses out west, or log cabins way down south, and the morning glories were always peeping in at the window, and the people in the little houses that we sang about were always letting the rest of the world roll by, and be quick about it.

We used to hear about these happy homes, yes, and we remembered them, too.

But now all we hear about is the miserable home.

The place where everybody is lonesome and neglected and mamma has gone out to play bridge and daddy is staying at the club for dinner.

PARADE OF ENVY

And the other sort of homes with bitter hearted men, and furious, envious, cruel women, frightening the children, with their hatreds and their jealousies.

I hate to pick up a new book these days, or read a column in a daily paper for fear of hearing someone moan about their neglected, harassed, misunderstood, bitter-hearted childhood in a miserable, unhappy, uncomfortable, neglected, embittered home.

Where do they all come from these people, who started "rebelling" in their very cribs—these women who hated their mothers from the minute they saw that mamma's hair was curlier than theirs and had more gold in it?

These men who hated their own brothers, because big brother could throw a baseball farther than little brother?

What's it all about anyhow this parade of bitterness and envy—I can't make it out, can you?

USED TO BE HAPPY

Yes, my childhood was happy, and I'm glad of it. I knew lots of other children who were happy and good natured, and as full of fun and play as any little gump of a curly lamb frolicking in the sunshine of a gay spring morning on the side of a soft green hill.

It isn't the children who are unhappy, because someone else has more than they have—children—if we could only be as kind and as loving and as happy as the average child, every one of us what a paradise we could make of this poor bewildered world of ours.

The next time somebody starts to tell me how miserable they were when they were children I'm going to shut the book or fold up the newspaper and burst into more or less unmusical song.

I'll sing "There Is a Happy Land Far, Far Away," or something like it—and let it go at that.

How about you?

By Edgar A. Guest

TRIBUTE

To honor him at trifling cost
On parchment was his name embossed.
And those who to the dinner came
Added their tributes to his fame.
But all they said who looked behind
The record of his working days
Was, he was honest, brave and kind,
And helpful in so many ways.

One spoke of courage he had shown.
Another made his friendship known
By telling of a thoughtful deed,
That served a brother's hour of need.
But unto no one it occurred
That any tribute should be paid
By flowery phrase or flattering word
Unto the money he had made.

Tributes are never paid to gold
However much a man may hold.
No parchment is engrossed to state
The wealth that men accumulate,
But after years of service true
Friends gladly honor us if we Have done the little all can do
And been the help that all can be.

Stars and Stripes

Hope springs eternal in the human breast.—

Rarely, a lottery ticket does the rest!

"Soaking the thrifty" is O. K. as long as it is confined to bathing sections of our beaches.

All the newswriters broadcast it when the police radio broadcaster's car was stolen.

President Roosevelt's birthday anniversary will be celebrated January 30. But the "many happy returns" came when the votes were counted in the recent elections.

A writer has discovered that "pollen from flowers is found practically everywhere." Well, so are flowers!

Human Side of the News

Underneath the "Wishing Tree"

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Tuning in on the Harlem "wishing tree" ceremonies the other day, I thought of old Ezekiel:

"A great eagle came unto Lebanon and took the highest branch of the cedar and carried it into a land of traffick; he set it in a city of merchants."

At two o'clock in the morning, passing 132nd street and Seventh avenue, I once saw an old, bent Negro step under Harlem's "tree of hope," the one that is now replaced. He lifted his hands and murmured supplications. I thought then of the cedar branch set in the city of merchants, and how Ezekiel and poets and prophets from the beginning of man's first great aspirations have symbolized health and immortality and fortunes in trees of hope. Running down the story of African wishing trees, you find E. Clodd, explorer and writer, returning from South Nigeria. He records this speech by a native:

"Yes; we say this big tree is our life—this big tree. When one of us dies, his spirit does not go to another country, but into the big tree; and this is why we will not not have it cut. We sacrifice to the big tree and every request is granted."

The record runs far into deep jungles of time and geography. One generation, one race after another, has like Zoroaster, venerated trees as intercessors with the gods.

Is there efficacy in the thrice-spoken word? Is it an echo of far-off jungle drums?

I don't know—but, at any rate, the old maple tree is Harlem's wishing tree—its tree of hope.

There has been sadness among these happy black folk who bring their tree "into a city of merchants. Nearly 70 per cent of the workers of Harlem have been unemployed. Thousands of them, children of the age of faith, made their wishes under the old tree, and they and new applicants now seek the new tree.

A year or so ago a friend told me he heard an old Negro woman mumbling under the tree. He heard the word "radio," repeated time and again. She was telling the tree spirit that somehow she would find bread, if only a way could be found to pay the installment on the radio.

"Auntie, will you let me help you?" asked my friend, stepping out from behind the tree.

"Child, did you come down out of that tree?" asked the old woman.

There were four orphaned grandchildren living in an unheated flat with the woman. They were playing the radio late that night, and the pickaninnies were dancing, because the radio was to be taken away in the morning. They had some oatmeal, but no other food. It was a big, shiny radio. It is still there, and there's heat and food in the flat. One of the pickaninnies is going to be another Bill Robinson, the way he can dance.

"You and I were talking about bread and hyacinths," my friend writes me. "I think there's a lot to be said for the hyacinths. We never get security, anyway. I made a lot of friends up in Harlem after that little incident I told you about. I just can't help liking people who sing, and who ask the wishing tree for a radio when they're hungry.

"Maybe you think this tree thing is just a phony and that superstition should not be encouraged. You can make your own ticket on that, but whatever you do, don't kid the wishing tree."

Hendrik Van Loon

WRITES ABOUT

College Discipline

I have been wading through the bale of printed wood-pulp which the newsboy leaves at my door daily, early in the morning. Once more the undergraduates of one of our great universities had hoisted themselves onto the front page.

Hendrik Van Loon

I have forgotten what it was all about. But if I remember correctly, they had burned a large straw figure that was supposed to represent their president. They had gone on strike. They had loudly proclaimed the inviolability of the Campus, the hallowed ground of their Commonwealth of Learning, from any intrusions on the part of the cops. In short, they had made a damnable nuisance of themselves.

They had been rather funny in a childish sort of way. Besides, it had been such a lovely day, the hottest day in November, within the memory of man.

With the sun shining so brightly, it had been much pleasanter to declare a holiday and to start a fine old Carnival of Nonsense than to go indoors to be reassured about the habits of the hypothenuse and the lack of habits of the irregular Greek verbs.

ACTED FOOLISHLY

And so the students had done what is the eternal privilege of youth, they had made fools of themselves while trying to make fools of their elders.

After all, why are we young? Partly because we cannot help ourselves for being young is a very difficult experience, and perhaps the most difficult of all experiences connected with life.

And partly because we should then give vent to our animal spirits and make donkeys of ourselves so that, once we have reached the years of discretion, we shall be able to behave more or less like intelligent human beings, and not do certain things at the age of fifty or sixty which we should have done at the age of seventeen or twenty.

Look at the world in which these children are growing up. Here we are passing through the gravest and the most thoroughgoing social and economic and intellectual and spiritual upheaval of all times, and the dear old pedagogical faculty seems to believe that the kids have not yet noticed that something is wrong, or should at least behave as if they had not noticed it, although it is brought to their attention every morning, noon and night.

WAY HE'S TREATED

It is a grand and marvellous thing to be alive just when the universal sense of indignation at the manifold insufferable ills of our planet has shaken us all into a realization that the thing is up to us right here and now.

But every time, and the silly infant, in his own bewilderment and misguided way, shows "growing pains" and starts on some fool adventure of his own, he is treated as if he were guilty of high treason against the dignity of learning and against the safety of the state.

And unless he is lucky he gets expelled and the whole business, which should and would have been settled by the application of 1 per cent of 1 per cent of common sense and good-humored irony, is allowed to degenerate into an unseemly squabble between the faculty and the student body, and more taxpayers' money is frittered away by these unnecessary clashes between the old and the young, than by all the campus rows of the last 50 years.

No, this is not a plea for that unhappy educational system which forces little children to do what they like to do. As if the poor darlings knew! Without discipline we shall never get anywhere at all, be it on board ship or on the campus of a university.

But the best disciplinarian of all is the man who knows when to frown and when to smile. In order to do this, he must have a cast-iron temper and the nervous system of an alligator, combined with the patience of a saint and the understanding of a sinner.

Such men, however, exist. And they can be had for practically no money at all. For theirs is the grandest job of all, to turn the wild savages of today into the wise leaders of tomorrow.

Words of the Wise

A limitation is simply a lack of perceiving the truth.—Thomas L. Masson.

The unexamined life is not worth living.—Socrates.

He that judges without informing himself cannot acquit himself of judging amiss.—John Locke.

We do not need a youth movement in any large American city, but we need a truth movement.—Dr. Robert E. Speer.

What holds attention determines action.—Professor William James.
